The First Secretary, died in 1890.

SHERMAN HOAR,
A Member of the Class Committee, died in 1898.

INTRODUCTION.

To the Class of '82:

I present to you herewith Secretary's Report No. V., covering the period from Jan. 1, 1896, to the middle or last of the year 1900. I had hoped to have this Report ready for distribution in the autumn of 1900, but much of the necessary information came in so slowly that the returns would have been far from complete at that time. I thank you all for your cordial assistance, and for the many expressions of interest in the report and of friendship for the Secretary.

The duties of the position are a pleasure to me; and, fortunately perhaps for the class, I have the time as well as the inclination to devote to the work. As the years go on, I think that the class feeling grows stronger, and the memory of those happy years that we spent together in Cambridge binds us more closely.

It is my aim to keep this spirit of fellowship strong; and I ask you all to assist the Secretary in this labor of love, by coming to the class reunions, and by giving me promptly some little information about your life and your family, such as will enable me to write the brief biographies necessary to keep up our acquaintance with each other, even though we are not able to meet.

And I ask you particularly, when you change your address, to keep me posted, as I have had great difficulty in finding the whereabouts of a few of our number; and I regret to say that Delaney and Rogers are now among the missing, all trace of the latter being apparently lost. I should be very glad of any clew that will assist me in finding either of them.

The mortality in our class has been very heavy, greater, in fact, than that of any class since '71, with the two exceptions of '75 and '77; and, if we include our temporary members, I think our losses will be found to be greater than even those two classes. We have lost 28 out of our 184 regular members and 11 of the temporary members, or about one-sixth of our number; and many of them were among the distinguished members of the class.

Since 1895 we have lost Bullard, Gillespie, Hopkins, G. M. Richardson, C. Eliot, P. Washburn, Hoar, Dabney, Heywood, and Norman; and, while this Report was being printed, Townsend has died.

I have inserted a portrait of every one of the above who was a regular member of the class, except that of Townsend, which I shall put in the next Report. This has increased the cost of the Report very materially, but adds greatly to its value; and I regret that this custom has not been followed in previous Reports.

Our class has met informally every Commencement Day at 13 Holworthy; and we have had two regular dinners paid for from the income of the class fund, one at the Exchange Club, Boston, on our fifteenth anniversary, June 29, 1897, and the other at the Parker House, June 26, 1899. At each of these dinners there were 47 present; and there was music and very informal after-dinner talking, Whitman, as chairman of the Class Committee, presiding at one dinner, and the Secretary at the other. All the other years on the night of Commencement there have been informal subscription dinners in Boston; and we shall always try to continue this pleasant custom, so that a member coming from a distance can be sure of a dinner each year.

The income of the class fund is just about enough in five years to pay for two dinners, five Commencement spreads, the printing of the Report, and such other necessary expenses as are sure to arise.

As many members have expressed a wish for some midwinter meetings, such as the older classes have, the Secretary got up an inexpensive subscription lunch at the Union Club, Boston, on Jan. 19, 1901, which proved a great success. There were 45 members present, several coming from a distance; and the universal comment was that it should be repeated, some even going so far as to advocate several in each winter.

We have lost a member of our Class Committee, Sherman Hoar; and at our meeting in June, 1899, it was voted to leave the vacancy unfilled, for at least two years, out of respect to his memory.

As the Secretary now has a committee of five to assist him, the two Boston members, Wait and Bowen, being particularly helpful, there is really no necessity for adding any one else to the committee.

Our class had its representatives in the Spanish War: Kane, as lieutenant and captain in the "Rough Riders," who saw active service in the battles around Santiago; and our late associate Norman, who served as executive officer of the United States supply ship "Glacier." J. H. Bacon, whose life-work has been in the United States Engineer Corps, was a first lieutenant of engineers, U.S.V., and served with the army in the Southern camps.

Hoar was the very active and efficient agent of the Massachusetts Volunteer Aid Association, attended to the shipping of supplies to Santiago, and made several visits to the camps, to aid the soldiers from his State. While at the camp at Montauk, he contracted typhoid fever, from which he died, as much a victim of the war as if he had been killed by Spanish bullets.

Drs. H. L. Chase and Prescott both served as surgeons at that same camp, the former in response to a call from the surgeon-general for medical aid, and the latter as an agent of the Massachusetts Volunteer Aid Association, and later as acting assistant surgeon, U.S.A. Chase went to Fort Crook, Neb., as surgeon to the 22d Regiment of regular infantry.

It has been suggested that, should Harvard erect a memorial to the victims of the war, we place upon it a tablet to the memory of our distinguished classmate, Sherman Hoar.

Several of the classes have put some form of memorial in or around the College, some among the older classes putting windows in Memorial Hall, and some of the later classes building gates or portions of the wall that is being erected around the yard. These have been paid for by subscriptions made for the purpose, as the ordinary class fund is barely sufficient for the usual expenses of a class. Our class has never done anything of the sort; and in the years to come we may feel that we want '82 to be represented by some tribute to our Alma Mater, but it must come from the voluntary contributions of our members.

The Secretary will not issue his next Report till just on the eve of our twenty-fifth anniversary, and I shall try to make that Report cover the doings of the quarter-century. I hope you will all keep me posted from time to time on whatever of importance happens to you, and all news that comes to me that would interest the class will be published in the Harvard Graduates' Magazine. This magazine has won a high place in the literary world, and as the dignified representatives of the graduates, and is worthy of a far more active support than it gets; and every Harvard man who can ought to be a subscriber, and ought to lend his support to this work, which many other colleges have thought to be of sufficient merit to warrant the starting of similar magazines.

Our class fund is in excellent condition, and a comparison of our investments with those of other classes will show that we have been fortunate in not meeting with some of the snares into which even good investments are liable to fall.

The Secretary has bought for the class an inexpensive loving-cup to be used at all our dinners and lunches, and Professor Kittredge has promised to give us a suitable inscription for it. We are indebted to Professor Beale for a sketch upon the progress of the college for the past five years, which is printed toward the end of the Report.

With the kindest personal regards, and best wishes to all, I am,

Your friend and classmate,

HENRY W. CUNNINGHAM.

Boston, Jan. 28, 1901.

RECORD OF THE CLASS.

1895 TO 1900.

ALFRED MARSTON ALLEN.

Writes: —

"My law partnership with Mr. Arthur Stem was dissolved some three years ago, since which time I have continued the patent practice by myself in Cincinnati.

"My family still consists of my wife and three children,—two sons and a daughter,— the oldest now thirteen years of age.

"I have served two terms of two years each as mayor of the village of Glendale, and I am a candidate for re-election at the April (1900) election.

"I was a candidate for the State legislature from this county in 1897 on the Republican ticket, but was defeated by a narrow margin."

He was elected mayor at the election in April, 1900.

LUTHER STETSON ANDERSON.

Lives in Quincy, Mass., and writes: —

"I have been since 1893 superintendent of the Quincy Quarry Railroad Company, located at West Quincy, Mass. Its five miles of railroad were built under my supervision, and since its completion I have superintended its stone and railroad business. We handle, annually, over three and four per cent. grades and sixteen degree curves, from four to five thousand carloads, or say seventy-five thousand to one hundred thousand tons, of Quincy granite.

"April 21, 1899, I was also chosen manager of the Granite Railway Company, capital $250,000, which built the first railroad in America, connecting its quarries with the Neponset River. It long ago disposed of its railroad, but now owns by far the largest and the best quarry in Quincy, and also owns a quarry in Concord, N.H.

"I was a member of the Quincy City Council in 1893, 1894, 1896, and 1897, but have held no other political office.

"I have been for about ten years a parish assessor and treasurer of the First Congregational Society (Unitarian), which dates its existence from 1639, and beneath whose walls are buried two Presidents of the United States (John and John Quincy Adams). Am also a trustee of the Quincy City Hospital and a manager of Adams Academy. I am not married."

CHARLES WALKER ANDREWS.

Lives in Syracuse, N.Y., and writes: —

"My life since my last report has not been very eventful, although there have been some material changes in it. I was married on Sept. 24, 1898, to Mary Frances Hyde, of this city; and I have a young and promising daughter, Marcia Shankland Andrews by name, who was born Feb. 27, 1900. I am still practising law in this city, and have been a member of the firm of Knapp, Nottingham & Andrews up to January 1, 1900, when by reason of my brother having been elected judge of the Supreme Court the firm was changed; and the present firm of which I am a member is Goodelle, Nottingham Brothers & Andrews."

ANDREW PRESTON AVERILL.

He writes: —

"I have but little of interest to write. From 1895 to 1897 I was principal of Sawin Academy and Dowse High School at Sherborn, Mass.; and since then I have held a similar position in the McGaw Normal Institute at Merrimack, N.H. I have no dates or honors to mention of special importance."

[In September, 1900, he was appointed supervisor of schools for the towns of Tisbury, West Tisbury, Chilmark, Cottage City, and Edgartown, all on the island of Martha's Vineyard; and he removed to Edgartown.]

"The Class Baby has completed his high-school work, and proposes at the age of eighteen to enter a law school. He has purchased a Blackstone, and is reading some law meanwhile."

JAMES WOODS BABCOCK.

At last accounts he lived in Columbia, S.C., where he was practising his profession of medicine, and was superintendent of the State Lunatic Asylum.

In June, 1896, he was elected one of the vice-presidents of the Harvard Medical Alumni Association.

ROBERT TILLINGHAST BABSON.

Is a lawyer with an office in the Sears Building, Boston, and lives in Brookline in winter and Gloucester in summer.

He was married June 14, 1900, at Gloucester to Miss Alice Cary Jordan, daughter of William H. Jordan of that city.

CHARLES FRANKLIN BACON.

Writes from Newton, Mass.: —

"Since the last Report, my life has continued uneventful, but very busy, with my bank work week-days and music evenings and Sundays. I am still with the Newton National Bank, am an organist and chorister in a Newton church, and pianist at Newton Young Men's Christian Association, and on the Executive Committee of Newton Christian Endeavor Union, in all of which positions there is plenty of hard work.

"I have not yet had time to think of marriage."

JAMES HAYWARD BACON.

Lives in Fernandina, Fla., and writes: —

"I have continued to hold the position of assistant engineer in the Corps of Engineers, United States Army, from 1895 to the present time, except for a short period during the war with Spain, when I held a commission as first lieutenant in the Third Regiment of Engineers, U. S. V. I resigned this commission soon after the Peace Protocol was signed, and resumed my former position in this district (District of Florida).

"I was elected a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers in January, 1900.

"I am not married."

In 1895 he completed his work as engineer in charge of the government work of improving the St. John's River, Florida.

CHAMBERS BAIRD.

"Still reside in Ripley, Brown County, Ohio, on the Ohio River, and am engaged in the practice of law. Have little of special interest to report, but have been occupied with affairs of business and political and social life. Was appointed United States referee in bankruptcy in September, 1898, and during the latter half of 1899 was also engaged in special service with the United States Engineer Corps on the Ohio River survey from Marietta to Cincinnati.

"Have contributed some verse, sketches, and other articles to publications, and a sketch of Ohio life to the souvenir volume of the Ohio Valley entitled 'The Hesperian Tree' for 1900, edited by Mr. John J. Piatt. Several years ago assisted Mr. Hamlin Garland in gathering material relating to the early life of General Grant, whose home was in this county. Have also been interested in local history and in other literary work.

"My family consists of wife, son, Harold Chambers, born 1890, already reported, and daughter, Florence Jeannette, born March 5, 1896."

EDWARD WILD BAKER.

"1882–95, Purchasing Agent's Department, Mexican Central Railway, Boston; 1895–96, manager of manufacturing corporation, Boston; 1896–98, private secretary to Hon. Charles F. Sprague ('79), member of Congress, Eleventh Massachusetts District, Washington, D.C.; 1898– , town clerk of the town of Brookline, Mass. Married, Nov. 12, 1888, to Alice Gertrude Souther, of Melrose, Mass. Children: Dorothy Baker, born June 11, 1891, died Sept. 30, 1899; Kenneth Souther Baker, born, Oct. 19, 1893, died, Oct. 1, 1895."

CHARLES ADOLPHE BALDWIN.

Does not reply.

Rumor says that he spends part of his time in California, where he has a ranch near San José, and that he travels much.

He was married at San Mateo, Cal., July 7, 1896, to Miss Ella Virginia Hobart, daughter of the late William S. Hobart.

He is now (September, 1900) in Europe; but his usual address is the Union Club, San Francisco, Cal.

CLARENCE BANCROFT.

Is superintendent of the Manchester Print Works at Manchester, N.H., and writes that he has nothing of particular interest to report.

Another daughter, Edith Stone Bancroft, was born Nov. 2, 1897.

GEORGE FRANCIS BARLOW.*

Born in New York City, Oct. 5, 1860.
Died in Brooklyn, April 15, 1891.
See Report IV., page 12.

JOSEPH HENRY BEALE.

Is professor of law in the Harvard Law School, and writes: —

"My address is now 29 Chauncy Street, Cambridge. I became professor of law Sept. 1, 1897. On Sept. 16, 1897, I was appointed by Governor Wolcott member of the Massachusetts Commission for the Simplification of Criminal Pleadings. I helped prepare the report of this commission to the legislature of 1899, and helped draw the bill which was enacted as Chapter 409 of the Acts of 1899. I have published 'A Treatise on Criminal Pleading and Practice' and several collections of cases for use in my classes at the Law School. I have also written a few articles on legal subjects, and a pamphlet on the 'Recognition of Cuban Belligerency.' I was for two years (1895–96 and 1896–97) chairman of the Committee for the Regulation of Athletic Sports."

In October, 1900, while still retaining his position as professor of Law, he became the senior partner of the new law firm of Beale, Hutchings & Beale, with office in the Tremont Building, Boston, and will devote a portion of his time to private practice.

JOHN REMSEN BISHOP.

Is principal of the Walnut Hills High School at Cincinnati, Ohio, and writes: —

"Since 1895 I have nothing to report except that I served on the Committee on College Entrance Requirements of the National Educational Association and upon the Auxiliary Committee on Latin of the American Philological Association, and that I am a member of the American Social Science Association.

"I believe that the Committee on Entrance Requirements did work of permanent value, and that its report deserves the attention of all interested in public education."

WILLIAM ALLEN BLAIR.

Lives in Winston, N.C., and writes: —

"I have little of interest to report. Was married Nov. 20, 1895, to Miss Mary E. Fries, daughter of Hon. J. W. Fries, Salem, N.C. We have two children: Margaret Agnes, born Nov. 25, 1896; and Marian Hunt, born Sept. 8, 1898.

"I was president of the People's National Bank from its beginning, 1890 to 1896, when we made a combination with the First National Bank; and I became vice-president and manager of the consolidated institution. I was admitted to the bar in 1894, and now belong to the law firm of Blair & Blair. My brother, however, does most of the active work in this department. I took part as a Sound Money Democrat in the 1896 campaign against Bryan, and am vice-president of the Sound Money League for North Carolina. Am a member of the State Board of Public Charities. Have been for ten years secretary of our Chamber of Commerce, and was last year president of the State Bankers' Association. Am now vice-president of the Bank, vice-president of the Street Railway Company, and a director in the Bank, the Street Railway Company, Forsyth Manufacturing Company, South Side Cotton Mill, Forsyth Chair Company, Inside Land Company, South Side Land Company, Mt. Airy Manufacturing Company, and am a trustee of the Slater Industrial and State Normal School I have written a number of magazine and newspaper articles, and have delivered a number of lectures and addresses, both North and South. On March 9, 1900, I delivered an address on the Negro Question in the University Extension Course, Philadelphia. Have recently published a little book on 'Banks of Issue,' and have written the 'History of Banking in North Carolina,' being a portion of J. J. Knox's 'History of Banking,' to be published by Bradford Rhodes, New York. I have an A.B. from Harvard, and also from Haverford; and an A.M. from Trinity College, North Carolina. Was a post-graduate student at Johns Hopkins, but was obliged to leave before taking a Ph.D."

WILLIAM ASHLEY BLODGETT.

Is now living at South Lincoln, Mass., and makes no reply to the Secretary.

JAMES WILLIAMS BOWEN.

Is a member of the Boston Stock Exchange. His partner, Eben Sutton ('85), has retired from business; and the firm is now J. W. Bowen & Co. He is not married, and lives with his brother, Dr. John T. Bowen ('79), at 14 Marlborough Street.

ALEXANDER BOYD.*

Born in Boston, Mass., Oct. 5, 1860.
Died in Waukesha, Wis., Aug. 26, 1891.
See Report IV., page 14, also portrait as frontispiece to that Report.

CHARLES EDGAR BOYNTON.

He writes: —

"I have but little to add to my report of five years ago. I have already told you I was made an M.D., in my last report; and so my address is 70 State Street, Chicago.

"I have been professor of chemistry in the National Medical College here for three years. And am at present head professor of chemistry in the Dunham Medical College and Hospital.

"I am also president of the High School Teachers' Club of Chicago.

"I have written a little; and one book, a Chemistry Manual, is in use here in Chicago, though published by Heath & Co. As you don't ask for travels, I will say I have explored the Pacific Coast from California up into British Columbia, and the Atlantic from Yarmouth, N.S., to northern New Brunswick, and been several times into the wilds of northern Michigan and Wisconsin."

RICHARDS MERRY BRADLEY.

He writes: —

"My business has continued to be that of the purchase and management of real estate in Boston and other cities. I have been living at Chestnut Hill, Brookline, during the last four years.

I have four children: Amy Owen, born July 3, 1893; Helen Aldis, born Feb. 25, 1895; Walter Williams, born July 17, 1896; and Sarah Merry, born March 9, 1898.

"During the last few years my business has taken me to many of the large cities of the West, where I have found the class of '82 well represented and all Harvard men hospitably inclined."

Address 85 State Street, Boston.

CHARLES JEROME BROWN.*

Born in Worcester, Mass., Dec. 16, 1858.
Died in Worcester, Mass., Dec. 6, 1890.
See Report IV., page 16.

JOHN SWEENEY BRYANT.

He writes from Florida, where he passed the winter and spring of 1900: —

"My life has been so uneventful the last few years that there is nothing of importance to write about. I have spent the winters in the South or California, and the summers largely in Nova Scotia, searching, as many a man has done before, for that perennial spring of health which Ponce de Leon vainly sought. I run across an '82 man now and then, and guess we must be a class of rovers.

"I was married at Providence, R.I., on June 16, 1892, to Mary Eleanor Allen, grand-daughter of Robert Rodman of Lafayette, R.I. We have no children."

His home address is 236 Niagara Street, Buffalo, N.Y.

GEORGE CLIFFORD BUELL.

Is a member of the wholesale grocery house of George C. Buell & Co. of Rochester, N.Y.

He writes: —

"I think the only records of importance which you want for the Class Report are the names and dates of birth of my three boys: George Candee Buell, born Feb. 27, 1893; William Ackerman Buell, born Oct. 23, 1896; Robert Lewis Buell, born March 6, 1898."

Sincerely yours
J. H. Bullard

*JOHN ELIOT BULLARD.

Born in Boston, Mass., Oct. 2, 1861.

Died in Sydney, Australia, June 7, 1896.

John Eliot Bullard was the oldest son of Stephen Hopkins Bullard, one of the old-time Calcutta merchants of Boston, and of his wife Elizabeth Eliot, a sister of the President of Harvard University.

He passed his early life in Boston, and fitted for college at the Roxbury Latin School, where he graduated in 1878, and entered Harvard in the autumn.

In college he was a member of the Institute of 1770 and the Hasty Pudding Club. He was a diligent student and an excellent scholar, and was a member of the Φ. B. K., and graduated with honorable mention in Philosophy, with a Dissertation at Commencement.

After graduation he entered the Boston office of Henry W. Peabody & Co., foreign merchants trading with Australia and the Philippine Islands, and for a time had charge of their branch office in New York City.

But Bullard was never a man of robust or sturdy constitution, and he had already been obliged to take a long voyage for his health; and he now found that it would be much wiser not to continue to live in the cold climate of New England.

His firm, fully appreciating his integrity and a mercantile ability rare in one of his years, offered him a partnership in the house, which would require his residence in Australia, which he gladly accepted; and in December, 1891, he removed to Sydney, N.S.W.

Here, with the exception of one short trip to Boston, he passed the rest of his days; and on Feb. 22, 1892, he was married to Miss Elsie M. Prescott, of Adelaide, South Australia.

Bullard was a successful merchant, and was respected and beloved in his new home; and yet there seemed almost a touch of pathos when he wrote in November, 1895, "I am almost an Australian; but all my interests are in America, and I hope some day to be able to live in my native country."

He died in Sydney, June 7, 1896, leaving a widow, but no children.

WILLIAM HENRY BURNHAM.

He is still at Clark University, Worcester, Mass., and writes: —

"During the last five years I have continued the rather monotonous although extremely interesting work of instructing graduate students in this university. I have done some writing and lecturing besides, but have no special honors received or public services performed to report."

CHARLES DEAN BURT.

He is sales agent in Fall River for the Staples Coal Company, and writes: —

"I am still located in Fall River, where I have been since 1885, and am still in the same business in which I started — namely, coal and transportation."

FREDERICK RUSSELL BURTON.

"My last contribution to the Class Reports, if I am not mistaken, was printed in the issue of 1890. Taking up the record at that point, these are the events that have been of special importance or interest to me.

"I went to London with my family in the winter of 1891, and remained there in newspaper work for rather more than a year. While there, I was employed by the New York Herald; and I maintained regular connection with that paper for some months after I returned to America. My third child, Charles Winfred, was born in October, 1892. My wife died a few days later. In 1893 I went to Boston, and remained in that vicinity until the spring of 1895. During this period I took a flying trip to Europe for the purpose of observing the conditions of immigrant travel. In 1895 I gave up journalism for the writing of fiction. I was married on Sept. 16, 1895, to Susie M. Carr, of Amesbury, Mass. Took residence in Yonkers, N.Y., and have lived there since. In this city various circumstances led me into musical activity, to the end that now I am rather more musician than anything else. Here I have completed the composition of 'Hiawatha,' a work projected and begun while I was in college. This is a cantata for mixed chorus, soloists, and orchestra. It came to its first performance in Yonkers in April, 1898, and was presented in Chickering Hall, New York, in the May following. The cantata has been performed in various places since. The success of 'Hiawatha' led me to write another cantata, 'The Legend of Sleepy Hollow,' of which I am guilty of verse text as well as music. Several performances of 'The Legend' are now in preparation. Both cantatas are published. I have composed in other forms, but have made no effort to bring my pieces to public notice. Among the manuscripts that some day may be offered are a string quartette, an overture, a hymn for two choruses, and various orchestral compositions, besides any number of songs. I have had several novels published, and many serial and short stories. I am conductor of two choral societies, and lecturer on musical topics for the New York Board of Education and the University of the State of New York. The immediate work upon which I am engaged is the music to a comic opera, for which I have written the play and verse text. The production of this work is scheduled for the beginning of the next dramatic season."

WALTER NELSON BUSH.

He writes from San Francisco: —

"I am still principal of the Polytechnic High School, January of this year being my eleventh anniversary as principal.

"My address is the Cliff House. It is my main claim to distinction that, as I dine at night in its corridor, I am probably the most westerly man in the United States, setting aside from consideration our colonies and latter-day acquisitions.

"I trust that any classmate will call for me, should he come within the shade of that famous resort."

GODFREY LOWELL CABOT.

Is a manufacturer of carbon black, with office in Boston and four factories in various parts of the country. He lives in Cambridge. He writes: —

"In June, 1895, I bought the carbon black factory at Saxonburg Station, Butler County, Pa., formerly owned by Nolen & Boardman, and during 1896 and 1897 replaced the old machinery with new, increasing the output fifteen-fold, and removing the machinery from Foster's Mills thither.

"Feb. 24, 1898, I sailed for Europe, visiting between then and June 24 England, Holland, Belgium, France, Switzerland, Italy, and Austria, passing through Servia, Bulgaria, Constantinople, and thence along the north coast of Asia Minor, touching at Sassum, Trebizond, via Batum and Tiflis to Baku on the Caspian Sea.

"At Trebizond I had most authentic and circumstantial accounts of the hideous massacre that took place there by the mandate of the Sultan.

"At Baku I saw an oil well producing thirty-five thousand barrels per day. Returning by way of the eastern and southern shores of the Black Sea, I saw at Odessa the first official recognition, so far as I know, by any foreign government of our authority in Asiatic territory, in the shape of a letter from the Russian government, under date of May 14, 1898, our style, asking for credentials for a Russian transport sailing from Odessa to Vladivostok, in case said transport should wish to stop at the Philippine Islands. Thence I journeyed, via Kiev, Moscow, St. Petersburg, Helsingfors, Stockholm, Christiania, Copenhagen, Hamburg, to England again.

"That fall I bought the Sunset Carbon Black Works, near Butler, Pa., and sold a half interest to my brother, Mr. Samuel Cabot.

"I am now building a fourth carbon black factory, and the first factory of any kind, in Calhoun County, West Virginia.

"I have written numerous newspaper articles on various subjects, particularly advocating the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands, and printed a speech I made on this subject at the Massachusetts Civil Service Reform Club."

HENRY GARDNER CHAPIN.

Is a member of the paper manufacturing firm of Chapin & Gould in Springfield, Mass. A son, Russell Chapin, was born Dec. 15, 1898.

HEMAN LINCOLN CHASE.

He writes: —

"Dear Mr. Secretary,— Since your most interesting Report appeared in 1895, my address has become 172 Aspinwall Avenue, Brookline, where I continue actively engaged in the practice of my profession. In my last letter to you I wrote that I had the honor of being chairman of the special committee appointed by the town to secure for it improved public bathing facilities. I am glad to be able to say that as the result of our work Brookline now has the first municipal all-the-year-round bathing establishment in this country, containing swimming facilities as well as cleanliness baths. It was opened to the public on New-Year's Day, 1897, has been in successful operation ever since, and the past year 49,391 baths were taken there.

"Largely through my efforts systematic instruction in swimming and life-saving has been made a regular part of the curriculum of our Brookline schools, and the children enter upon this branch of their education with real enthusiasm.

"On Nov. 11, 1896, I was married at Potsdam, N.Y., to Miss Margaret Everett, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Everett; and the following May we went abroad for a four months' journey, visiting places of professional and general interest in England, France, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, and Italy.

"In December of the same year, after recovering from an attack of diphtheria, I visited Florida, and in the spring made a short visit to North Carolina.

"An interesting episode of the summer and fall of 1898 was my sojourn at Montauk Point, Long Island, N.Y., where I went with a few other Harvard men in response to the call of Surgeon-general Sternberg for medical men to temporarily care for Shafter's sick and exhausted army, just returned from Santiago. The amount of typhoid fever, intermittent fever, dysentery, and other disease among these soldiers was much greater than many people have any idea of; and it was not surprising that our classmate Sherman Hoar contracted his fatal illness there. During a single day at Montauk there were seventeen deaths.

"I had sole charge, medically, of one of the sickest regiments of regulars, the 22d Infantry. After some weeks I accompanied the regiment to its post, Fort Crook, Nebraska, where we found plenty of medical officers.

"I then returned home, well satisfied with my experience, but more convinced than ever of the gigantic folly of trying to settle differences by resorting to war.

"The next event of interest was the advent, June 25, 1899, of our little daughter, Mary Everett Chase, whom we hope to send to Radcliffe in about 1918.

"Among the societies and clubs of which I am a member are the Massachusetts Medical Society, American Publishing Health Association, Boston Society of Medical Sciences, Brookline Medical Club, Brookline Education Society, American Peace Society, and the Anti-Imperialist League.

"I am still connected with the Health Department of Brookline, for which I am now busy with plans for a larger and more up to date hospital for the isolation and care of patients ill with contagious diseases.

"Such papers as I have written have naturally been on medical subjects, the latest being entitled 'An Outbreak of Diphtheria due to Infected Milk.'"

WALTER GREENOUGH CHASE.

Some few years ago, after making a success of his business of the Mason Regulator Company, he sold out his interest, and retired from active business.

He had long been an expert amateur photographer, and took up the X-ray work of this art, and in this connection assisted several Boston surgeons.

His interest in surgery and medicine began to increase, and he entered the Harvard Medical School as a regular student, and hopes to receive the degree of M.D. in 1901, but probably has no idea of entering active practice. He has been a great traveller in his own and foreign countries, and has written several accounts of his travels for papers and magazines. He is not married.

EDWARDS CHENEY.

Does not reply.

He still lives in Lowell, Mass., and is much interested in local politics. He has been a registrar of voters, and in November, 1900, was elected as a Republican to the Massachusetts legislature.

Address, 53 Chelmsford Street.

JOSEPH PAYSON CLARK.

He writes: —

"My profession continues to occupy most of my time and thought. I am still a physician for diseases of the nose and throat at the Massachusetts General Hospital, and am also an instructor in laryngology in the Boston Polyclinic. In May, 1897, I was elected a member of the American Laryngological Association; and in December, 1898, I was appointed consulting laryngologist to the Boston Insane Hospital. For the past three or four years I have taken quite an interest in yachting in a small way."

Residence and office, 409 Marlborough Street, Boston.

HAZEN CLEMENT.

Is a member of the Boston Stock Exchange, and is senior partner of the firm of Clement, Parker & Co.

Address, 53 Devonshire Street.

* JOHN McGREGOR COCHRANE.

Born in Cambridge, Mass., April 6, 1859.
Died in Somerville, Mass., Aug. 6, 1895.
See Report IV., page 22.

ROBERT CODMAN.

He writes from Portland, Me. : —

" Since the last Class Report, at which time I was rector at St. John's church, Roxbury, Mass., I have been elected and consecrated bishop of the diocese of Maine. No further degrees or honors have been received, or other important offices held, or other notices to communicate."

FRANK NELSON COLE.

" Has been professor of mathematics at Columbia University since 1895. Became secretary of the American Mathematical Society in 1895, and editor of the society's Bulletin in 1897. Is general utility man of the society, and devotes odd time to his lectures. Otherwise not engaged in any great movements, except as commuter. Family vixit et floruit, sed non crevit. Any member of the class who may be in New York will find him in room 406 of College Hall, Columbia University, from ten to four every day. This is also his mail address, Montclair being postally benighted."

ARTHUR MESSINGER COMEY.

Is a chemist in Boston, and lives at 54 Concord Avenue, Cambridge. He writes : —

" Since the last Report was issued, I have become engaged in technical work in chemistry. At first I was in charge of the New England branch of the Trade Chemists' Company of New York, and was engaged in working up and introducing new processes in the chemical tanning of leather. Two years ago I became associated with Professor Carmichael in Boston, with whom I have ever since been engaged in working out and developing various new chemical processes, and at present am devoting myself to a new chlorination process for the extraction of gold from very refractory and low-grade ores."

He is a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

FRANK GAYLORD COOK.

Is a lawyer at 10 Tremont Street, Boston, and writes: —

"In answer to your request for information for Class Report No. V., I would say that since 1895 I have continued to practise law here, and to reside at Cambridge in the house, 44 Garden Street, that I built in 1894. June 30, 1896, I was married to Miss Alice Burr Sterling (Radcliffe College, class of 1896), at her home in Bridgeport, Conn. In the summer of 1897 Mrs. Cook and I travelled in Europe, touring in England, Norway, Sweden, Russia, Germany, Italy, Switzerland, France, Belgium, and Holland. Again last summer, 1899, we took a bicycle tour of some six hundred miles chiefly in Wales and the west of England. I had a paper in the Atlantic Monthly for June, 1899, on 'Politics and the Judiciary'; and I have a paper in the Harvard Graduates' Magazine for March, 1900, upon 'The Delta Upsilon at Harvard.' No children."

JOSEPH AUSTIN COOLIDGE.

Is instructor in the English High School in Cambridge, and head master of the Evening High School. He writes: —

"Since our last Report, I have been quietly at work in our high school, with no change except a moderate increase in salary. I have, unfortunately, received no honors, taken no degrees, held no important offices, and had no additions to my family. I confess a strange feeling comes over me at times, when I see a perceptible increase in the number of gray hairs or plan with my children as to high-school courses and preparations for college. Still, I have much with which to be content. I look forward with expectation to the issue of your Report."

He is also a member of the Eastern Association of Physics Teachers, and is this year taking a course in the Harvard Graduate School.

CHARLES TOWNSEND COPELAND.

Is instructor in English and lecturer on English Literature at Harvard. He also gives readings in Cambridge and in Boston.

Residence, 7 Stoughton Hall.

FRANK LEONARD CREESY.

"Since the last Report I have resided continuously in Saranac Lake, with the exception of one winter spent in the South. Having, in a measure, regained my health, I have resumed the practice of law. I am also the president of the Adirondack Park Company, an incorporated company transacting a general real estate business in this region. My present address is Saranac Lake, N.Y."

MORTON STIMSON CREHORE.

In 1897 he retired from the firm of H. G. Jordan & Co., coal dealers, and became connected with the Cornelius Callahan Company of 127 Purchase Street, Boston, dealers in fire department supplies.

Lives in Brookline in winter and Cohasset in summer. Plays polo.

MONTGOMERY ADAMS CROCKETT.

Is a physician in Buffalo, N.Y., and writes: —

"My story is soon told. I am still practising medicine in Buffalo. I hold the position of Adjunct Professor of Obstetrics and Clinical Gynecology in the Medical School, and am on the attending staff of two hospitals. Beyond this I have nothing interesting to report."

Address, 452 Franklin Street.

ROBERT CUMMING.

He is manager of the Scottish County and Mercantile Insurance Company, Ltd., the head office of which is at 52 Hanover Street, Edinburgh, Scotland.

He writes a long and interesting letter to the Secretary, which the latter ventures to insert in full, as it gives such a pleasant picture of the life of our one classmate who is a subject of Her Britannic Majesty: —

"It is with much pleasure that I respond to your circular requesting me to send some notes of my doings since 1895, the date of the last Class Report; and I only hope that my delay, consequent upon pressure of other work, will not cause you any inconvenience. I look forward to receiving my copy of this year's Report, as my interest in Harvard, and particularly in Harvard, '82, is as keen as it has ever been. Through the kindness of my old chum, Lysson Gordon, I am kept well posted in most of the public doings of our Alma Mater; but of course, the Class Report contains personal notes that it is not possible for any one ordinary member of the class to give.

"I see my notes in the 1895 Report state that I had just been appointed manager of the Farmers' and Land Owners' Insurance Company. This post I still retain, though the name of the company has undergone a considerable change, as you will see from the heading of the paper. The career of the company has been a success, considering everything; and, of course, I share in that success. And, though by no means a wealthy man, meantime I cannot grumble; and, besides, there are always possibilities in the future.

"By way of amusement, I have been qualifying as an actuary, and in April, 1898, took the first examination of the Faculty of Actuaries here. In this examination I was fortunate enough to come out first; but, owing to lack of time, I have not yet taken the second and third examinations necessary for full qualification. I hope to take the second examination in April of next year.

"I have taken part in a revival of the Drury Lane drama of 'Youth,' by the Dramatic Club connected with my old volunteer corps, the 1st Lanark Rifles, my wife also taking a part. I figured as the Rev. Joseph Darlington, a clerical hypocrite of very doubtful morality.

"In the Volunteers I now hold Her Majesty's commission as lieutenant in the 4th Volunteer Battalion of the Royal Scots (Lothian Regiment), and but for family ties would certainly have done my best to be sent to fight against those hypocritical scoundrels, the Boers. In my opinion, their so-called Republics, which are really oligarchies of the very worst type, ought to have been swept off the face of the earth years ago. They are simply hotbeds of political vice and maladministration, as bad or worse than the Tweed Ring of evil memory. I was in camp with the battalion at Aldershot in 1898, and enjoyed the work extremely.

As I was in command of the advance party which had the work of pitching the tents, etc., for the whole battalion previous to the arrival of the main body, I was on duty for forty-eight hours to begin with, without relief, though, of course, I got snatches of sleep for an hour or two, and was consequently pretty well tired out. My work, however, for the remaining week was correspondingly easy; and the outing, and particularly, I think, the sleeping under canvas, did me a lot of good. It was simply marvellous to see what an improvement the men showed in general smartness after the few days of steady drill and association with the regular troops. But, with the experience of the South African campaign known to all the world, I don't need to say anything in praise of our Volunteers or Regulars, either: they are prepared to do everything possible, and try even the impossible.

"A son, William Neville, was born to us on the 22d of September, 1899, and has now developed into a sturdy, healthy little boy, and a handful to tackle, as his mother could tell you. I am afraid, however, that there is little prospect of his following his father at Harvard, as I should like him to do.

"I have given you rather a long epistle, what we in Scotland call a 'screed'; but you need only use such portions of it for the Report as you see fit.

"Kindest regards to yourself and all the other members of '82 whom you may meet and who may remember me, and assurance of my presence in spirit at all class functions."

HENRY WINCHESTER CUNNINGHAM.

The Class Secretary regrets that he has no achievements to report and little to say that is of interest to the class.

I lead a quiet though fairly busy life. I have an office at 89 State Street, Boston, for the management of material affairs, though I have so many interests calling me in other directions that I fear that many of my classmates may have called and not been able to find me.

My home is at Manchester, Mass., and during the winter months at 351 Marlborough Street, Boston.

I am always glad to get a letter from and still more so to see any of my classmates; and in my library in my Boston house I have a slowly increasing collection of books, clippings, and other matters pertaining to the class, which I shall always be glad to show to my classmates.

I was married in Boston, Oct. 30, 1899, to Miss Mary May Hayward, only daughter of the late Isaac Davenport Hayward, of Milton (Mass.) and Boston. I am still deeply interested in the study of New England History and Genealogy.

WILLIAM DE LANCEY CUNNINGHAM.

Is connected with a banking and brokerage firm in New York. Lives at 449 Park Avenue.

CHARLES FRANCIS CUTLER.

He lives in Boston, and writes: —

"Since the Secretary's last Report, I have continued in the wholesale drug business. After the deaths of my uncle in October, 1896, and my father in January, 1898, I was the sole active partner. In the fall of 1899 I originated and financed an amalgamation of four of the seven wholesale drug firms in Boston; and, as a result, the Eastern Drug Company, incorporated under the laws of Massachusetts, with a paid up capital of four hundred thousand dollars, started in business Jan. 1, 1900. I am the treasurer of the company.

"I was married April 23, 1896, and reside in Boston in the winter, and Cohasset, Mass., in the summer. In January, 1899, was elected president of the Boston Druggists' Association."

RALPH POMEROY DABNEY.*

Born at Fayal, Azores, Sept. 1, 1859.

Died at Milton, Mass., Jan. 15, 1899.

Ralph Pomeroy Dabney was the son of Samuel Wyllys and Harriet Webster Dabney, and was descended from a branch of an old Virginia family, which four generations ago had migrated to Massachusetts, and intermarried and been associated with the best families of Boston.

While they became thoroughly Bostonian, some members through all these generations had lived in the island of Fayal, where they were merchants and American consuls; and they had become so thoroughly associated with the place that the mention of its name at once suggested the Dabneys. Here our classmate was born and here he spent his boyhood, except such time as he was in America at school or visiting relatives.

Yours sincerely

R. W. Gibney

He entered Harvard with the class of 1881, but joined our class when we entered in the autumn of 1878. He was a member of the Hasty Pudding Club and the Natural History Society, and one year played on the university football team. But all will remember him as an indefatigable worker in the gymnasium, where he performed feats of tumbling and trapeze work.

After graduation he returned to Fayal and entered into mercantile life, and continued in this occupation till 1891; but the commerce of Fayal had dwindled to almost nothing through the decline of the Atlantic whale fisheries, and the fact that America raised its own oranges and lemons, which in the first half of the century had come in large quantities from the Azores. So in 1891 the Dabney family severed its long connection with Fayal, and removed to southern California.

They bought a ranch of about 560 acres at El Cajon, about fifteen miles from San Diego, which they named "Fayal Ranch."

Here Ralph lived, and superintended the raising of oranges, lemons, and raisin grapes, and led an active, out-of-door life, of which he spoke with great enthusiasm. During the winter of 1898 he had a bad ill-turn, and came East in the following summer, which he passed with relatives on the island of Naushon in Buzzard's Bay, in the hope of regaining his health. But he rapidly grew worse, and had another bad shock of a paralytic nature, and died Jan. 15, 1899, at the home of his sister in Milton, Mass.

He was not married.

Twice after graduation he was in Boston, and was present at the class dinner in 1886.

He was universally liked and was the very essence of good nature, and the pleasant smile that always lighted up his face was indeed contagious; and, though he was seldom present at our reunions, we all had the feeling, when he did come, that we wished he might be with us often.

FRANKLIN ARTHUR DAKIN.

He is a master in the Haverford College Grammar School at Haverford, Pa.

He writes:—

"My life since 1895 has been uneventful. I have enjoyed excellent health, and have been kept busy with my interests in the school and outside. Spent the summer of 1897 in Italy and Greece."

WILLIAM HENRY DANFORTH.

Lives in Plymouth, Mass., and is a clerk in the office of his father, who is the register of deeds for Plymouth County.

He writes: —

"Am in Plymouth in the registry of deeds, not practising at present. No additions to family. After leaving Worcester, I practised medicine in Albany, N.Y., for two years. My leisure is devoted mostly to music, and my vacations to boating and fishing. But still very proud of '82 and its good record."

WENDELL PHILLIPS DAVIS.

He writes: —

"Nothing noteworthy since last Report. Am living in Brooklyn, and am still connected with the A. J. Graham Company at 1133 Broadway, New York."

CLARENCE RANDALL DEAN.

He writes: —

"Things are very much the same with me as in 1895. I am still with the General Electric Company in New York."

He has two sons: Francis Baylies Dean, born Aug. 31, 1895, and William Waith Dean, born Feb. 28, 1898.

RICHARD DELANEY.

Was a physician at Woodville, a part of Hopkinton, Mass.

The postmaster of that place writes the Secretary that Delaney has left town, and he does not know his present address, except that he is said to be in or near Boston.

The Secretary has inquired of many M.D.'s, but cannot find any one who can throw any light on the whereabouts of Delaney.

GEORGE WASHINGTON DICKERMAN.

Lives in New York, and writes: —

"When the last Class Report was printed, I was in Australia, where I had the good fortune to meet nearly every day, and to know most intimately, our late classmate, John Eliot Bullard. I had known him so slightly in college that I was very glad indeed to be thrown near him. I learned to admire and esteem his many excellent qualities as I never could have done otherwise.

"My visit in Australia was made in connection with my business, and after my return in 1898 I became the vice-president and general manager of the United Typewriter and Supplies Company. This position I held until the beginning of 1900, when I was elected president of the same company. There is very little in the busy routine of my daily life that is new or can be of interest to any one."

CHARLES DENSTON DICKEY.

Lives in New York City, and writes: —

"Since the last Class Report in 1895 my life, though a very happy and fairly successful one, has not been particulary eventful. I have continued to reside in New York, where, as a partner in the banking firm of Brown Brothers & Co., I am actively engaged in business."

Address, 59 Wall Street.

GEORGE BRADFORD DUNBAR.

He is still connected with the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, but his duties have taken him from St. Joseph, Mo., to Chicago; and he writes: —

"I am sorry to say I cannot report any 'honors thrust upon me,' except my appointment in October, 1898, to the position of assistant general auditor of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, which I still hold, with headquarters in Chicago."

WILLIAM HARRISON DUNBAR.

Writes: —

"Since 1895 I have been engaged steadily in the practice of the law as a partner in the former firm of Warren & Brandeis and its successor, Brandeis, Dunbar & Nutter. On June 14, 1898, I was married at Calais, Me., to Katherine Copeland, daughter of Henry C. and Sarah L. Copeland, whose brother, Charles Townsend Copeland, is our classmate. For the past year and a half I have been living in my own house, 58 Highland Street, Cambridge. I have held no offices, received no honors, and taken no degrees."

*CHARLES ELIOT.

Was born in Cambridge, Nov. 1, 1859, where he fitted for Harvard, entering with our class in 1878. During the year following his graduation he took a course in horticulture, surveying, etc., at the Bussey Institution, and in May, 1883, became draughtsman and assistant in the office of Mr. F. L. Olmsted, the well-known landscape architect, where he remained till April, 1885. In the following autumn he went abroad, and travelled for a year in order to study the parks of Europe and other matters connected with his profession. It was during this European trip that he met Miss Mary Yale Pitkin, to whom he was married Nov. 28, 1888, at Colorado Springs, and who, with four daughters, Ruth, Grace, Ellen Peabody, and Carola, survives him. After returning from Europe, he began business independently as a landscape architect, with an office in Boston, where he practised his profession with ever-increasing success until March, 1893, when he became a member of the firm of Olmsted, Olmsted & Eliot, with which he remained connected until his death, March 25, 1897. It was largely through his influence that the Trustees of Public Reservations were incorporated, of which he became secretary, and that the Metropolitan Park Commission was subsequently appointed, in which he served as landscape architect. The public and private works with which he was concerned were very numerous and in many instances important and extensive, while his publications were among the most notable contributions to the literature of his subject that have appeared in recent years.

A majority of his classmates doubtless remember Mr. Eliot as a quiet man, whose natural reserve and studious habits tended to withdraw him from active participation in the social life of his class. Those of us, however, who were so fortunate as to become intimate with him and feel the truly elevating influence of his personality, found in his friendship one of the rare and compensating influences of life. While, therefore, his sudden death some years ago was both a loss to the public and a cause of sorrow and regret to the hosts of friends he had won, it had a far deeper significance to those nearest him, to whom his rare spiritual qualities had been shown without reserve. He was a man of most serious and earnest thought and purpose, with that subjective religious sense which needs no incentive from without to shape the conduct of life, and yet at the same time of an eminently sympathetic nature which constantly attracted the confidences of others. Even persons who knew him but slightly were impelled to go to him with their troubles or life problems as well as to share with him any happiness allotted them.

The high ideals which were the moving factors of his life were not less prominent in his professional work, for which an innate love and appreciation of natural beauty, combined with an artistic temperament which showed itself even in his handwriting, had made him exceptionally well fitted. He spared no effort to acquire a broad foundation of equipment for his profession; and his just sense of proportion and well-balanced grasp of its larger problems, combined with a keen appreciation of values in details, soon made him an authority in his chosen field of activity. With all this special capability the strength of character and purpose which had always distinguished him, and a remarkable capacity for quiet accomplishment that became conspicuously developed in his later life, gave his work great effectiveness in the organization and prosecution of works of improvement, both public and private. These works, and especially the Metropolitan Park System in the vicinity of Boston, which was the most important and characteristic undertaking with which he was concerned, remain a fitting memorial of his too brief life. At the very beginning of a brilliant career, when he had achieved professional success, which together with his great domestic happiness gave him everything to live for, his untimely death was peculiarly tragic. Yet, short as was his active life, his class may well be proud of what he did as well as of what he was.

ALBERT DANNER ELLIOT.

Writes from Washington, D.C.: —

"On July 26, 1897, William McKinley, President of the United States, appointed me clerk of the United States District Court and ex-officio Secretary and Treasurer for Alaska. I was immediately confirmed by the Senate, and left for Sitka, Alaska, the capital, my office being also that of ex-officio Secretary of the Territory. I became Acting Governor whenever the Governor was absent from the Territory. Was Acting Governor of Alaska a number of times during my term of office. The longest period was for six months, from December, 1899, to the latter part of May, 1900, the Governor being absent in Washington, D.C.

"I was Acting Governor of Alaska when the war with Spain commenced, and had the honor of tendering a regiment of troops to the President.

" In August, 1899, we held a session of the United States District Court at Circle City, on the Yukon, and at Nome. This was a matter of importance, as these terms of court were the first ever held in that section of the Territory. Our journey was from Skaguay, Alaska, to Dawson, and then down the mighty ' Yukon River ' to St. Michael, and from there to Nome.

" Our return trip from St. Michael to Sitka was made on the revenue cutter ' McCulloch,' a vessel well known to all since our war with Spain as Dewey's despatch boat, etc. I resigned from office June 30, 1900, declining reappointment under the new Alaska laws which passed Congress at its last session. Three years of constant hard work had undermined my health; and, in addition, the office had been so changed by legislation that I no longer desired the same. I am proud to say that I retired with the reputation of being the most efficient officer that ever held the position."

FREDERICK WARE EMERSON.

He lives in Moody, on Big Tupper Lake in the Adirondack Mountains, N.Y., and writes : —

" I have lived here for the past ten years, but have nothing of importance to record."

WILLIAM GORDON FELLOWS.

He writes from New York City : —

" I can add very little to the report of 1895. I spend my time between this country and Europe, with my sister who lives in England.

" I have had several yachting trips in the Mediterranean and West Indies.

" I am still unmarried.

" My address is the Knickerbocker Club, New York."

The Secretary understands that Fellows has a fine farm at Schaghticoke in Rensselaer County, N.Y.

FREDERIK ATHERTON FERNALD.

" The past five years have brought an important change in my occupation, but very little in my other relations. In 1895 I secured from New York University, which had moved to the suburban part of New York City, near my house, the privilege of conducting a college bookstore on its grounds. Two years later I bought out a larger store, opposite Columbia University, and secured a similar privilege on the new grounds to which that university moved a few months after. At this time I gave up my position as assistant editor of Appletons' Popular Science Monthly, which had been almost my only occupation from the time I left college, and became a business man. One year later I annext the book-room formerly conducted by Teachers College, making it the third branch of my business. Barnard College, the girls' department of Columbia, is supplied by my Columbia store, and the Horace Mann School, a private institution of 500 pupils, by my Teachers College store. It will thus be seen that I am trying to be for the colleges of New York the Charles W. Sever and Co-operative Society rolled into one. Except for revising a guide-book to New York City each year, I have given up editorial work. No travels, no honors, no offices, no change in my family."

BURTON MONROE FIRMAN.

Is an editor of the Evening and Sunday Telegram of Providence.

He writes: —

"I have made no changes since the last Report. I am a busy man, but there is little in my life to interest the class."

JOHN McGAW FOSTER.

He writes: —

"After nearly a year in Europe, where I was at the time of the last Report, I returned to Bangor, remaining there as rector of St. John's Church until January, 1899, at which time I removed to Boston to become rector of the Church of the Messiah in that city, which position I now hold.

"Publications: articles in newspapers and magazines, and occasional sermons.

"One child born since last Report: Duncan Graham, born May 26, 1897.

"Present address, 81 St. Stephen Street, Boston, Mass."

GEORGE HILLS FRANCIS.

He writes: —

"I am still practising medicine in Brookline. In August, 1896, I moved to 295 Walnut Street.

"On July 20, 1897, Augustine Shurtleff Francis was born, and on Dec. 29, 1898, Payson Clark Francis.

"Have held no public offices nor attained any literary honors."

HENRY CORMERAIS FRENCH.

Lives at Evanston, Ill., and is president of French, Thomas & Co., incorporated, dealers in china, glass, etc., at 90 Wabash Avenue, Chicago.

His second son, Abram Waldo French, was born Sept. 12, 1897, at Chicago.

FRANK EDWARD FULLER.

He writes: —

"I am still, as for the past nine years, connected with the Providence Journal as editorial writer and book reviewer; and I do more or less other work for weekly papers and magazines, besides having one or two other literary projects on hand of which the class may hear later. I have also delivered a few lectures, chiefly on the subject of Scottish Ballads.

"I am a member of the University Club in Providence, the Harvard Club of Rhode Island, the Churchmen's Club, and various minor organizations."

He also writes to the Secretary that he writes his name Edward Fuller, having dropped the "Frank" for literary reasons.

John Gillespie

HOMER GAGE.

Is a physician and surgeon at Worcester, Mass., and writes: —

"I am still engaged in my professional work, now chiefly surgical, at the same address. I have one son, Homer Gage, Jr., born Nov. 17, 1895. For the last three years I have been one of the directors of the Crompton & Knowles Loom Works of this city."

Address, 72 Pearl Street.

DAVID CLAIBORNE GARRETT.

Writes: —

"Accepted the rectorship of Trinity Church, Portland, Ore., September, 1897. Elected to the rectorship of St. Luke's Church, San Francisco, beginning Sept. 1, 1899."

JOHN GILLESPIE.*

Born in Malden, Mass., July 12, 1860.
Died in Boston, Mass., June 7, 1896.

John Gillespie was the son of William Gillespie, who was born in Paisley, Scotland, but was for over forty years a resident of Malden, Mass. Here our classmate was born and passed his early years, and fitted for Harvard at the Malden High School.

He was of quiet and retiring disposition in college, as in after life, and took no active part in the social affairs of the class.

He was a good scholar, and immediately after graduation entered the Harvard Medical School, where he received the degree of M.D. in 1885, and then pursued his studies for two years in the schools and hospitals of London, Vienna, and Aberdeen.

Upon his return to America in 1887, he began to practise his profession in that part of Boston near the Roxbury Crossing. Here he lived until his death, June 7, 1896, quietly following his professional work, and rising in esteem and reputation. He was married in Boston, Oct. 28, 1891, to Miss Aurelia Christina Vollmer, of that city; and on Sept. 13, 1893, was born a son, whom he named Burton Gordon Gillespie, the first name, Burton, being for his classmate, Burton M. Firman, and the middle name, Gordon, being his mother's name. He was a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society and of the Washington Lodge of Freemasons.

HENRY HALE GILMAN.

Lives at 38 Summer Street, Haverhill, Mass., and is one of the most enterprising business men of that city.

He was married there, Dec. 22, 1896, to Miss Helen Louise Smiley.

FREDERICK NORTON GODDARD.

Is a merchant in New York, of the firm of J. W. Goddard & Sons.

Jan. 1, 1900, he was appointed a personal aide on the staff of Governor Roosevelt, of New York, which gives him the title of Captain Goddard. He was married Nov. 22, 1898, to Miss Alice Grenville Winthrop, of New York, and has a daughter, born Dec. 8, 1899.

Goddard is perhaps best known for the splendid work he has done for the poor in the East Side of New York city.

Here he organized and managed the Civic Club, and built at his own expense a handsome and well-equipped club-house for the reformation and education of the young men of that district. He has given his personal attention to the practical working of this club, and for a time lived among the young men he was helping. The institution has been a great success and a most potent factor in improving the welfare and condition of the people of that neighborhood, and Goddard is regarded with the greatest admiration and respect by the young men whom he has helped.

CHARLES HENRY GOLDTHWAITE.

For some years the Secretary could not find any trace of Goldthwaite, and even now no word can be got from him.

He has apparently given up teaching, and is now called a "tourist agent." In 1898 his address was Grosvenor Club, London, W., England; and in February, 1899, it was at 196 Broadway, New York.

His family still live at 19 Bigelow Street, in the Brighton District of Boston, Mass.; and he has a son, Ralph Harvard Goldthwaite, in the class of 1903 at Harvard.

XANTHUS HENRY GOODNOUGH.

He writes from the chief engineer's office of the State Board of Health at the State House, Boston: —

"There is very little to add to my personal history since the last Class Report was made. I came here in 1886, when the State Board of Health was reorganized, as assistant engineer, and have been chief engineer of the board since 1895. I am a member of several engineering societies and clubs."

LYSSON GORDON.

He writes: —

"During the past five years I have grown a little older, a good deal grayer, and no richer.

"I have made no journeys, except the briefest of vacation trips, and find my chief enjoyment in my family and my pipe. I am still treasurer of the Eastern Banking Company, at 43 Milk Street, Boston, and continue a citizen of Medford. I shall welcome the new Class Report, and read it with keen interest, and regret I can add so little to it for the enjoyment of others. I have a fourth daughter, Helen, born at Medford Nov. 3, 1897."

JAMES JAY GREENOUGH.

Lives in Cambridge, and conducts the Noble and Greenough Private School for Boys in Boston.

He writes: —

"There is nothing new or of interest in my career.

"I am still preparing boys for the Alma Mater in partnership with G. W. C. Noble, '58. We have tried an experiment this year with a playground and boys' country club in connection with our school. Our hope is to improve the physical condition of the boys and incidentally provide material for future victorious 'varsity athletic teams."

He has two sons and one daughter.

ASAPH HALL

He writes from the Detroit Observatory, University of Michigan at Ann Arbor: —

"I am still at the observatory, teaching some and making astronomical observations. Was married July 14, 1897, to Mary Estella Cockrell, of Kane, Ill. We have one child, Katharine Cockrell, born Feb. 5, 1899."

FREDERICK STANLEY HALL.

He writes: —

"I am still practising law in Taunton, and my only additional honor worth mentioning is that I served as delegate to St. Louis Republican National Convention in 1896 from the Twelfth Massachusetts District. One of my sons, Richard Perkins Hall, died Sept. 1, 1898; and another son has been born, by name Frederick Hastings Hall, Aug. 24, 1898."

HENRY WINTHROP HARDON.

He writes: —

"At the time of your last Report, I was engaged at the Cornell Law School as professor of law. In March, 1895, I was appointed professor of law at the Columbia Law School in New York City. During the three years that I passed there under that appointment, I had all the courses in pleading and practice at common law, in equity, and under the code, besides others. In the winter of 1898–99 I resigned my chair at Columbia, to return to practice in New York City, where I am now so engaged, having an office at 56 Wall Street.

"I have printed privately an address on the Philippine case, which I had made to the Twentieth Century Club in Brooklyn in March, 1899. The Albany Law Journal for June 3, 1899, contains an article of mine upon a doctrine of the law of wills with particular reference to New York.

"I am a trustee of the Good Government Club of the Nineteenth Assembly District in New York City, and have been engaged somewhat in independent politics in this city."

Frank E. Heywood

GEORGE TRUMBULL HARTSHORN.

Lives at 7 Pleasant Street, Taunton, and writes: —

"I have nothing to report except that my address remains the same, and I am just so many years older."

FRANK SPANGLER HAUPT.

He writes: —

"I am engaged in dairying in southern Minnesota. Have a farm of about 135 acres on Albert Lea Lake, two miles from Albert Lea. We have five children. Katharine Haupt, Oct. 20, 1887, in St. Paul, Minn.; William Dean Haupt, Sept. 6, 1892, in St. Paul, Minn.; Herman Haupt, 3d, June 4, 1894; Frederic Chapman Haupt, March 11, 1896; Dorothea Haupt, Nov. 25, 1898,— last three born on the farm at Albert Lea, Minn. The farm is very prettily located, and the surrounding country very picturesque. We keep about thirty head of stock, and take the milk to a creamery near Albert Lea."

FRANK EVERETT HEYWOOD.*

Born at Worcester, Mass., April 20, 1860.
Died at Worcester, Mass., Oct. 25, 1899.

Frank Everett Heywood, the eldest son of Samuel R. Heywood, was born in Worcester, and always made that city his home. He graduated from the high school in 1877, and studied for a year at the Williston Academy, Easthampton, before entering Harvard.

Though never prominent during his college life, he was well known among his classmates, was a good student, and took much interest in track athletics.

After taking his degree in 1882, he at once entered his father's business, the manufacture of boots and shoes, and in the following January became a partner in his firm.

He rapidly mastered the details of this work, and threw a wonderful energy into the development and expansion of the industry, and with such marked success that his father was gradually withdrawing and leaving to him more and more of the management of the business, which was changed to a corporation, under the name of the Heywood Boot & Shoe Company, of which our classmate was treasurer and manager.

In January, 1896, he was elected a director in the Citizens' National Bank of Worcester.

In spite of his business cares he found time for other work; and, though he was never willing to accept a public office, he was always a ready worker for others. He was for several years a member of the Republican City Committee of Worcester, and its chairman, and in 1895 and 1896 was a member of the Republican State Committee.

He carried his fondness for athletic sports into his later life, and was on the first board of managers of the Worcester Athletic Club; and upon his shoulders fell most of the work for the club exhibitions.

He was married Dec. 18, 1884, at East Orange, N.J., to Miss Harriet Dodd Jennings, the eldest daughter of Horace N. and Myra D. Jennings, of that place, and had three sons and one daughter. He had travelled in Europe, been to the Azores, and taken many trips in the South and West. He was a man of intelligence and culture, and possessed a vast fund of information, which made him a most agreeable companion; and he was a member of many social organizations. He was an enthusiastic Harvard man, and always took the greatest interest in everything that belonged to '82.

During the last few years of his life he was not strong; but he was never an invalid, and always active with his many affairs. He took cold at a football game at Cambridge; and it rapidly developed into pneumonia, and he died within a week.

Perhaps no better tribute can be paid to his memory than the few words written shortly after his death by his classmate and friend, Dr. Homer Gage, of Worcester: —

" Frank's death was very sudden and unexpected to us all. He was at the football game at Cambridge last Saturday, and seemed very well. He had made a name for himself here in Worcester as a very active, energetic, and successful manufacturer, took a lively interest in all public affairs, and, although he declined public office, was a willing worker, ready to give freely of his time and money for the furtherance of what he believed to be the best public interests. I think he was one of the most loyal men to Harvard and to our class that we had in Worcester. In his death we have lost another of the hard-working, high-minded men who have proven themselves capable of great usefulness to their fellow-men, and given promise of reflecting great honor upon their college and their friends."

*SHERMAN HOAR.

Sherman Hoar was born at Concord, Mass., July 30, 1860, and was the son of the late Judge Ebenezer Rockwood and Caroline (Brooks) Hoar. He attended the public schools of Concord, and from there went to Phillips Exeter Academy, where he graduated in 1878 and entered Harvard. While he was by no means among the more prominent and popular members of the class during the four years we were in Cambridge, yet he was well known and liked by most of his classmates, and his strength of character and earnestness of purpose were even then recognized; and in the after years, as these traits developed and strengthened, they won admiration from his classmates, and at the time of his death he was the most widely known and most distinguished member of his class.

He was one of our class crew in the Freshman year, and he was a member of the Institute of 1770, Hasty Pudding Club, Finance Club, and Harvard Union; and in the Senior year he took a Boylston prize for elocution, and the class, knowing his force as a public speaker, made him the class orator at graduation.

After leaving college, he studied for two years at the Harvard Law School and then for a time in his father's office, and was admitted to the bar. He opened an office, and practised for a year or more at Waltham, where he made his home for several years, and then entered into partnership in Boston with Moorfield Storey ('66) and John L. Thorndike ('66), under the firm name of Storey, Thorndike & Hoar.

Belonging to a family that had long been distinguished in public life, he entered with enthusiasm into the questions of the time; and in 1884, when Mr. Blaine was nominated for the Presidency, he felt obliged to break away from the political faith of his father and uncle and he made several speeches against Mr. Blaine and in favor of tariff reform. He became a member of the Democratic State Committee; and in 1886 was a candidate for the State Senate, being defeated by about five hundred votes in a district that usually gave a Republican majority of twenty-five hundred. In the autumn of 1890 he was elected to Congress as a Democrat in a district that had always been strongly Republican; and in the next year he wrote of his life in Washington, "In Congress I did the usual work required by constituents, and played, I trust, a fairly useful part in the campaigns against free silver, which were fought with so much vigor in the Fifty-Second Congress." After serving one term, he returned to the practice of the law in Boston, and in August, 1893, was appointed by President Cleveland District Attorney for Eastern Massachusetts, and in this position tried several important cases, the best known being the Bram murder case. Later he associated himself with his brother, Samuel Hoar ('67), and continued with him till his death.

He was a trustee of Phillips Exeter Academy and a director of the American Unitarian Association; and, in connection with his interest in these directions, he made two non-political public addresses,— one before the scholars at Exeter on "True Citizenship" and the other before the Unitarian Club at Boston on "What the Younger Laity demand of the Clergy."

He was twice married, first to Miss Caroline Prescott Wood, of Concord, on June 2, 1886, by whom he had two children,— Roger Sherman, born April 8, 1887, and Ellen, born Aug. 13, 1891; and on Aug. 24, 1891, his wife died. Dec. 6, 1892, he married for a second wife Miss Mary Tolman Buttrick, of Concord, and had two more children,— Stedman Buttrick, born in 1893, and Elizabeth, in 1897.

The first part of his married life he lived in Waltham, but later removed to Concord; and after the death of his father, in 1897, he moved into the family homestead on the main street, and there he died in the same house where he was born.

In the early stages of the Spanish War he became deeply interested in the work that was being done for the sick and wounded; and, being made a member of the Executive Committee of the Massachusetts Volunteer Aid Association, he entered with zeal and enthusiasm into these labors,— superintended the shipping of supplies to Santiago, and visited the camps and hospitals in the South, and did an immense amount of work to relieve the suffering of the Massachusetts soldiers. He made a second trip in August among the camps, and on his way home went to the camp at Montauk Point, Long Island, and made a report on its condition, which resulted in the establishment of a diet kitchen, which had a very beneficial effect. He returned to Boston in a tired and weak condition, and, having mingled with men who were just recovering from typhoid fever, contracted the disease, and after a short sickness died at Concord, Oct. 7, 1898.

In a short sketch like this it is not possible to do justice to the career of Sherman Hoar, as might be done in a more extended memoir, but his classmates knew him well, and appreciated the strong points of his character; and these brief outlines of his character will show what an active life he led, in what esteem he was held by his friends and neighbors, and how ready he was to give his time and energy for any public work that was supported by the best sentiments of the community. He had given so much of his time to public and semi-public duties, many entirely gratuitous, that he had had little time to practise his profession and lay by means for the support of his widow and children. Soon after his death several public-spirited men in Boston started a testimonial, and in this many members of the class were given an opportunity to join; and all will be glad to know that the response was so hearty and generous that his family must feel that his work on earth was not without appreciation.

Very truly yours
James H. Hopkins

[During the year 1900 an excellent bust by Daniel C. French was completed and presented by friends to the Academy at Exeter.]

*JAMES HUGHES HOPKINS.

Born at North Truro, Mass., Feb. 20, 1861.

Died at Provincetown, Mass., Sept. 5, 1896.

James Hughes Hopkins, the son of Smith K. Hopkins, the well-known clerk of the courts for Barnstable County, was born in North Truro, Feb. 20, 1861, but passed most of his early life in the town of Barnstable, and from there entered college with us in the autumn of 1878. During his college life the only organization with which he seems to have been connected was the Harvard Union, probably with the idea of fitting himself for his future profession; for immediately after receiving his degree in June, 1882, he began reading law in Barnstable, as in fact he had done during previous vacations. From Dec. 1, 1882, to Feb. 28, 1883, he was principal of the grammar school at North Eastham, Mass.; and from Aug. 20, 1883, to Feb. 1, 1884, he filled a similar position at West Barnstable.

At the close of this engagement he began to practise law in New Bedford, having been admitted to the bar in the previous October; but in June, 1884, he removed to Provincetown and opened a law office, and here he lived during the rest of his life, and took a prominent part in the affairs of both town and county.

He was one of the trustees of the Provincetown Public Library, and at one time chairman of the board, and in 1885 was appointed by Governor Robinson as a trial justice for Barnstable County, but resigned this latter office in 1887, and later he was appointed a commissioner of insolvency for the county; and in April, 1890, the governor made him judge of the court for the second district of the county. But his time was not entirely given up to courts and law; and, with an activity worthy of a larger field, he found time to edit the Provincetown Advocate published by his brother, Howard F. Hopkins, and in 1884 published in the New England Magazine an article on the life of Robert R. Livingston.

In 1890 he assisted in the preparation of the article upon Provincetown in Blake's "History of Cape Cod." In the same year he prepared for publication the Catalogue of the Provincetown Public Library. He was working upon a law book to be entitled "The New England Town," and was gathering materials for a "History of Provincetown." And all historians and antiquarians will regret that he was not spared to finish this work.

He drew up a code of by-laws for his town, and was chiefly instrumental in securing a system of water-works. He was also treasurer of the Law Library Association for the county.

He married Oct. 29, 1890, Miss Annie Kittredge Gifford, daughter of James and Rebecca A. Gifford, of Provincetown.

He was in poor health for several years, but struggled bravely against disease, and did not give up his work till near the end. He passed away at Provincetown on Sept. 5, 1896, leaving a widow, but no children.

ALBERT ANDREW HOWARD.

Is assistant professor of Latin at Harvard, and lives at 8 Hilliard Street, Cambridge.

He writes: —

"I am almost sure that nothing has happened to me in the last five years which could possibly interest my classmates.

"I have taken no new degrees, received no new honors, held no new important offices since the last Report.

"I have lived in the same house during the entire period, and have had no additions to my family."

HENRY REESE HOYT.

Is a lawyer at 11 William Street, New York, and writes: —

"I am still a member of the firm of Daly, Hoyt & Mason, and my time is taken up almost entirely in the practice of my profession.

"I have three children: Margaret Maria, born Oct. 16, 1886; Elizabeth Sherman, born Jan. 8, 1891; and Alfred Otto, born June 1, 1892.

"I have been a delegate to many of the Republican conventions held in this city during the last ten years, and have also been elected as an alternate to the Republican convention to be held at Philadelphia next month, and was an alternate at the last Republican convention held at St. Louis four years ago."

HENRY MASCARENE HUBBARD.

He lives in Chicago, and writes: —

"Since the last Report of the Secretary my life has been uneventful. I have done nothing that I recall that is of interest to the class. While I have not been able to attend any of the dinners or commencement day reunions, I have been active in all Harvard matters in Chicago and vicinity.

"I am still a bachelor."

Address, 205 Goethe Street.

FREDERICK THAYER HUNT.

Is a member of the firm of Edmund S. Hunt & Sons, manufacturers of fireworks at Weymouth, Mass., and writes that he is in good health and spirits and always busy.

CHARLES GREEN ROCKWOOD JENNINGS.

Is a physician at Elmira, N.Y., and writes: —

"There is not much to add to my report in 1895. I am at present president of the Academy of Medicine in Elmira, member of the Board of Education, having served on the board four years, and chairman of music committees of the First Presbyterian Church for the past three years."

WILLIAM JONES.

Lives in New York City, and writes: —

"I am still preparing boys for college in the Cutler School, as I was at the time of the last Report.

"I have had two children: Alice Lane, born July 11, 1896; and Henry Cranston, born May 20, 1899.

"I have taken no degrees, received no honors, and held no offices."

Address, 71 East 54th Street.

CHARLES HALLAM KEEP.

Lives in Buffalo, N.Y., and writes: —

"I continue to hold the position of secretary of the Lake Carriers' Association, an organization comprising nearly all the vessels on the Great Lakes.

"I am also secretary of the Buffalo Merchants' Exchange, the principal commercial organization of this city.

"I have two children; both daughters: Eleanor Williams Keep, born March 20, 1896, and Martha Gibson Keep, born May 4, 1898.

"My address is 285 Summer Street, Buffalo."

WILLIAM WINTHROP KENT.

An architect in New York City, of the firm of Jardine, Kent & Jardine, at 1262 Broadway. He writes that he has no items of interest to report.

ALBERT BENJAMIN KINGSBURY.

He writes from the editorial department of the New York World : —

"The World newspaper continues to provide my bread and butter, and an ancient publishing house, for which I am reader and adviser, my cake and pie."

BEN RUFUS KITTREDGE.

He writes : —

"Married Miss Elizabeth Marshall, of Charleston, S.C., June 1, 1899. I live most of the time in California, where I have a ranch. P.O., Stockton, Cal."

GEORGE LYMAN KITTREDGE.

Is professor of English at Harvard University, succeeding to the work and the position of the late Professor Francis J. Child. When the latter died in 1897, he had almost completed his work upon the "Scottish Ballads"; and it was finished by Kittredge, who added a memoir of Professor Child.

Kittredge is widely known as a Shakespeare and Chaucer scholar, and has given much time to research and study of early English and Scottish literature.

He is a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, and is the president of The Colonial Society of Massachusetts.

CHARLES FRANCIS SWIFT KNOWLES.

Is a member of the law firm of Dickson & Knowles at 53 State Street, Boston, and writes : —

"Replying to your card of Feb. 10, 1900, regarding Class Report No. V., I would say that I have nothing to write concerning myself that would be of special interest to any of our classmates. I have practised law in Boston since being admitted to the bar soon after graduating. I have taken no degrees and received no honors (in the sense in which you use the term), though I have received some fees from time to time, which are fully as acceptable. I have held no important offices, and do not care to."

The Secretary would add that he has dropped the "Francis" from his name.

ALBERT FRENCH LANE.*

Born at Stratham, N.H., Aug. 31, 1860.
Died at Virginia Beach, Va., June 17, 1895.

GEORGE HENRY LEATHERBEE.

Since 1895 Leatherbee has until very recently lived in Chicago, where he was treasurer of the Reliance Lumber Company. Nov. 1, 1900, he removed to Boston, and become associated with the C. W. Leatherbee Lumber Company.

Address, 520 Albany Street, Boston.

HEYWARD GIBBONS LEAVITT.

He writes: —

"I have been chiefly occupied since last Report (1895) with a study of the beet sugar industry in this country, particularly its agricultural development, and in January, 1899, organized the Standard Beet Sugar Company, composed chiefly of New York and Boston capitalists, to build and operate a large beet sugar factory at Leavitt, Dodge County, Neb., about nine miles north-west of Fremont, Neb., on the lines of the Union Pacific and Chicago & Northwestern Railroads.

"The factory will be in full operation this fall, with a capacity to produce 120,000 pounds of standard granulated sugar per day (24 hours).

"I am president and general manager of the company, and live a short distance from the factory.

"I was married Nov. 28, 1898, to Miss Alvina Weller, of Merrick County, Nebraska, at Omaha, and have one child, a little girl, born here on Sept. 6, 1899, named Martha."

ARTHUR PRESCOTT LOTHROP.

He writes: —

"My life since the last Class Report has been too uneventful to be of much interest to members of the class.

"I have continued to practise law in St. Paul, Minn., devoting myself more particularly to patent law, and since 1897 have been a member of the firm of Merwin, Lothrop & Johnson, with offices in the Pioneer Press Building.

"I am still unmarried."

ROBERT LUCE.

Is president of the Press Clipping Bureau at 68 Devonshire Street, Boston. He writes: —

"Continue in the newspaper clipping business, the only change since 1895 being the establishment of offices in Cincinnati and Denver in addition to those in Boston and New York.

"Served a term in the Massachusetts legislature in 1899.

"As a result of passing most of 1895 in Europe, wrote 'Going Abroad?' a handbook of advice to travellers, which seems to be acceptable to the public.

"In 1899 went over for a three months' bicycle trip in England and France.

"Still live in Somerville."

In November, 1900, he was again elected to the Massachusetts legislature from Somerville.

* THOMAS WILLIAM LUDLOW.

Born in Yonkers, N.Y., Jan. 7, 1857.
Died in Yonkers, N.Y., April, 17, 1894.
See Report IV., page 47.

JOHN PLUMER LYONS.

Lives in New York, and sends the following: —

"John P. Lyons is now, as five years ago, manager of the advertising department of the United States Rubber Company. As this company is composed of eight different individual corporations, which in the aggregate manufacture about 35,000,000 pairs of boots and shoes in a year, doing an annual business of $30,000,000, he finds his time pretty well occupied."

Address, Office United States Rubber Company, 9 to 15 Murray Street, New York.

ARTHUR FRED McARTHUR.

Is treasurer and the active manager of the McArthur Brothers Company, which is one of the large firms of contractors in Chicago; and many stupendous undertakings in the West have been successfully carried out under the eye of our classmate. He writes: —

"I have nothing of interest to the class since the last Class Report. I have taken no new degrees since leaving college, have held no important offices, have only been married once, and am still alive with my wife and without children. Therefore, if you will simply kindly report me as on earth, and in the same line of business, and doing practically the same things as I was doing at the time of my last report, you will sum the thing in a nut-shell."

WALTER IRVING McCOY.

Is a lawyer at 149 Broadway, New York, and lives at South Orange, N.J., where he has held some of the more important town offices.

He writes that he has nothing of importance for the Report except the births of his two children, Philbrick, born Nov. 14, 1897, and Catherine Baldwin, born Sept. 20, 1899.

EDWARD VALENTINE McDONALD.

Is a physician at 5604 Madison Ave., Chicago, and writes: —

"I am sorry to have nothing of general interest to report. Your periodical account of the doings and sayings of our scattered mates is always so welcome that it makes me feel guilty of negligence in not bringing even a small dish to the feast. In the matter of family statistics I feel rather favored. Our boys will begin to report at Harvard about 1910; and, if nothing unfortunate occurs, it looks as if I shall have one or two representatives in college for a dozen years or more. For their welfare as well as for the pleasure of keeping in better touch with '82 men, I should like to see started as soon as practicable a new society at Harvard, — S. '82, S.— the sons of '82's sons, with membership limited to sons of say '81, '82, and '83 men."

RICHARD HAYES McDONALD.

Writes from San Francisco: —

"In response to yours, all I can add to what I have previously written to you is that in the month of September, 1898, I passed the Supreme Court examinations of this State, and was admitted to practice in all the courts of this State as attorney and counsellor at law, which I am now doing.

"My home is at 249 Pierce Street, this city."

WILLIAM HENRY McKENDRY.

Lives in Chicago, and is secretary of the Palmer, Fuller & Co. Corporation, manufacturers of doors, sashes, blinds, etc., on Lumber Street, south of West 22d Street. He writes: —

"I have absolutely nothing of interest to add to my last report in 1895. It would therefore suffice with regard to me to simply remark, 'See last Report.' Such reference, however, would probably result in the total eclipse of what is at best a very dim luminary in the galaxy of '82, so I will briefly state as follows: I am still located in Chicago, and engaged in the same business as heretofore reported. Degrees and honors do not fall to the lot of the ordinary business man, and none have been acquired by me. Important offices have also kept aloof from me, and I am perhaps happily content in being but a small factor in the business world with which I come in contact. I am still unmarried, and what were at one time at least prospects in that direction are now only possibilities, which grow beautifully (?) less with advancing years and gray hairs. I am still able to rejuvenate, however, if an '82 man comes this way and takes the trouble to look me up."

CHARLES FRANK MASON.

Is bursar of Harvard University, and writes: —

"My life during the past five years has been uneventful, and has been passed in Watertown, where I still reside, and in Cambridge, varied by an occasional excursion 'Down East' or South."

In his annual report for 1898–99, President Eliot says: "During the summer of 1899 the bursar's office was removed from the rear of Wadsworth House to the spacious and well-lighted room which makes the first story of the eastern half of Dane Hall. The new office should suffice for many years to come, even if the present rate of increase in the Cambridge branches of the University should continue. The rooms occupied by the bursar in the brick ell of Wadsworth House were restored to their former use as students' chambers. The bursar's office had been in that ell since 1868."

JOHN WHITING MASON.

Writes from Northampton, Mass.: —

"In September, 1895, I was appointed one of the special justices of the District Court of Hampshire, which office I still hold.

"In May, 1898, I was appointed receiver of the Hampshire County National Bank, which had lost heavily through the criminal acts of its former president, Lewis Warner. I had the good fortune in less than a year to settle all litigation, pay off all claims against the bank, and save from the wreck $100,000 for the stockholders. The stockholders thereupon voted to reopen the bank for business, and, putting in $50,000 new money, to make the capital $150,000. I have been president of the bank since its reopening. I still continue in the practice of the law at Northampton."

ALBERT MATTHEWS.

He writes: —

"My address is 145 Beacon Street, Boston. I am unmarried. My time is still divided between study and travel. The former is aptly summed up by Hamlet's remark, 'Words, words, words.' Each summer I have spent six or eight weeks in Europe in a successful effort to escape hay fever."

Matthews has given much assistance to Dr. Murray, of Oxford (England), in the preparation of his new dictionary, giving him the American meaning and history of many words.

He is a member of the American Philosophical Society and of the Colonial Society of Massachusetts, and has read before the latter many scholarly papers, covering a vast deal of research in the line of early American etymology.

GEORGE LOWELL MAYBERRY.

Is a lawyer, with offices in Ashburton Place, Boston, and at Waltham, Mass.

He lives in Waltham, and is one of the most prominent men of the place, having been city solicitor and three times mayor of the city.

EDWARD PERCIVAL MERRITT.

Is a member of the firm of Blodget, Merritt & Co., bankers and stock brokers, Boston, and writes: —

"I have nothing of interest to add since the date of the last Report. I am still engaged in the banking business at 16 Congress Street, Boston, varying the daily routine with occasional bits of travel at home and abroad."

ALFRED EUGENE MILES.*

The Class Secretary 1882–1890.
Born at Brookline, Mass., Aug. 30, 1860.
Died at Saranac Lake, N.Y., Jan. 8, 1890.
See Report III., page 59, also portrait as frontispiece.

SAMUEL HENRY MORRILL.

He is now Henry H. Morrill, as noted on page 53 of Report of 1895. He is an Episcopal clergyman at Clinton, Ia., and writes:

"Since the last Class Report, I have been rector of St. John's Parish in this city, where I have had the good fortune to build and furnish a new Gothic church of stone.

"After the death of Bishop Perry, I was chosen to preside over the Diocesan Convention to elect a bishop as his successor. At the last convention in Davenport I was elected a member of the Standing Committee of the diocese. These are all the honors I have had."

At the end of 1900 he removed from Clinton, Ia., to Holyoke, Mass., where he is now settled.

GARRETT EDWARD NAGLE.*

Born at Charlestown, Mass., Sept. 6, 1858.
Died at Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 13, 1885.
See Report III., page 61.

OLIVER ALLEN OLMSTED.

Probably there is no man in the class about whom the Secretary has more affectionate inquiries than about "Plum" Olmsted; and yet the Secretary has never but once been able to get any communication whatsoever from Olmsted, and that one time may account for his silence since.

On the evening of the complimentary dinner given to the late Sherman Hoar in 1890, Olmsted telegraphed congratulations from Lincoln, Neb., where he was then living, and added that they, too, were open to congratulations, as they had just brought forward and elected to Congress a brilliant young reformer named William J. Bryan.

Russell Whitman has kindly hunted up Olmsted at his present home in Chicago, and sends the following report: —

"Olmsted married Miss Florence Whiteman Aug. 12, 1898. No children, but possesses a cocker spaniel in which he has great pride.

"Is engaged in business on the Board of Trade in Chicago, and does not play baseball any more. Two years ago (1898) he played in the graduates' game at Chicago between Harvard and Yale, and distinguished himself as of old, making, it is said, a home run and two base hits.

"Has grown stout."

HENRY THOMAS OXNARD.

Oxnard has been one of the most successful men in the class, and is the head and front of the beet sugar industry in this country, and is president of the American Beet Sugar Association, and the principal man in the great beet sugar factories of Nebraska, Utah, and California, which turn out thousands of tons of sugar daily.

The town of Oxnard in Ventura County, southern California, where the largest of the factories is situated, is named in honor of our classmate.

His head office is at 32 Nassau Street, New York; and he is often to be found in Washington explaining the needs of the beet sugar industry to some committee of Congress.

He has taken many trips for business and pleasure, both in this country and Europe and Japan.

He was married at Paris, France, Nov. 15, 1900, to Miss Marie Pichon.

WILLIAM ENOCH PAGE.

Writes from Dungeness, Cumberland Island, Ga. (post-office address, Fernandina, Fla.): —

"Since 1895, as for four years previously, I have represented a branch of the Carnegie family of Pittsburg in the management of a large and diversified property on Cumberland Island.

"I am a citizen of Georgia, although my local business connections are all with Fernandina, Fla. I am unmarried."

ROBERT TREAT PAINE, 2D.

Is a lawyer at 1 Beacon Street, Boston, and lives in Brookline.

IVAN PANIN.

He still lives in the town of Grafton, Worcester County, Mass., and is both literary man and farmer.

He writes: —

"After leaving the lecturing field fallow for some ten years, I entered it again a year ago, and delivered a course on Emerson, Carlyle, Ruskin, and Arnold in Tremont Temple, Boston. Some of the lectures have been repeated elsewhere.

"My two volumes of 'Thoughts' have yielded to the spirit of the times, and have been consolidated into one, in a new edition, with additions; but, the more were added, the smaller the new volume grew.

"A third edition is now pressing, with the prospect that the volume will be still smaller; and, should a fourth be called for, it now looks as if it would consist of covers and title-page merely, with all else problematic.

"To accommodate a friend, I took off his hands the entire management of a daily paper for several weeks; and but for ill-health I would probably now be a full-fledged newspaporial dignity.

"Though I then knew next to nothing of Mr. Sheldon, I started out with his ideas, but not with his practice thereof. This is probably the reason why that paper did not collapse in a week and is still prosperous.

"Having been drawn into a discussion of evidences of Christianity in the New York Sun, my letters to that paper are now being reprinted in pamphlet form."

ELLIOTT HUNT PENDLETON.

Lives in Cincinnati, Ohio, and sends the following account of himself: —

"Pendleton has been practising law in Cincinnati ever since his admission to the bar, devoting special attention to the management of estates and trusts; is counsel for the Cincinnati Real Estate and Stock Exchange and the Municipal Art Society of Cincinnati; president of the Bankers' Reserve Fund Life Insurance Company; one of the directors of the University of Cincinnati; one of the curators of the Historical and Philosophical Society of Ohio; secretary of the Cincinnati Optimist Club,— a club formed for the purpose of considering subjects relating to the improvement or welfare of the city (the membership is limited to fifty, and the members meet at luncheon every Saturday during the year to discuss and act upon measures for the promotion of the general interests of the city); president of the Apollo Club of Cincinnati since its organization in December, 1882; life member of the Cincinnati College of Music and of the Cincinnati Art Museum Association; member of the Executive Committee of the Harvard Club of Cincinnati."

EDMUND SEHON PERIN.*

Born at Cincinnati, Ohio, Nov. 16, 1859.
Died at Santa Fé, N.M., Dec. 5, 1882.
See Report II., page 50.

GEORGE WILLIAM PERKINS.

Is a physician in Ogden, Utah, and writes: —

"I have resided here in Ogden all of the time for the past five years, and have been in the active practice of my profession, which has kept me very busy,— more busy, in fact, than I desired, a great part of the time; but hard work has always agreed with me, and, consequently, I have kept my good health and added a little to my avoirdupois.

"I have held no important offices and have taken no additional degrees (or additional wives, either).

"Such honors as I have received have been purely professional ones. On Oct. 7, 1896, I was elected to the presidency of the Utah State Medical Society for the ensuing year; and on June 28, 1898, I was elected a vice-president of the Harvard Medical Alumni Association for a term of three years.

"My family remains the same as at the last report, namely, one wife — in spite of a residence in Utah — and four children, the youngest of whom, designated in the '95 Report as 'an infant son,' has since attained the dignity of the name 'Arthur,' and managed so far to thrive and grow on that."

JOHN WALTER PERKINS.

Writes: —

"Replying to your circular letter of February 10, you may say that I still remain in the active practice of surgery in Kansas City, Mo. I am division surgeon for the Kansas Division of the Union Pacific Ry. Co., surgeon for the A., T. & S. Fé. Ry. Co., and chief surgeon of the L., K. & W. Ry. Am also connected with the University Medical College as professor of surgery, and still retain position of chief surgeon to St. Margaret's Hospital, which I have held for past twelve years. I have not had any special honors thrust upon me other than the minor ones which naturally follow several years of very hard work. Have held no important offices, and am not connected with politics in any way."

ERNEST NOEL PERRIN.

Writes from New York: —

"Dear Mr. Secretary, your powers of patience and long-suffering must be sorely tried. For myself, I have been ill and out of the city,— have had a severe attack of the grip, from which I am now only convalescent. Had you asked me for an abstract of the life of Hamlet or 'Le Misanthrope,' it would have pleased me better than my own. However, you give me a philanthropic motive in the idea of 'easing the labors of the Secretary.'

"Since 1895 I have been serving continuously in the Department of English Language and Literature in the College of the City of New York, rising (in 1898) from the rank of tutor to that of instructor.

"In 1897 I entered on a course of study in Columbia University for the degree of Ph.D,, which I hope to take in 1901. My subjects of study are mainly in the line of Romance Philology and Literature,— Old French, Italian, etc.

"In September, 1898, my wife died of consumption, after a year's illness. We had previously, in May, 1897, lost a child, Ernest N., Jr., who was just a year old. I am left now with one child, Edwin Oscar, eleven years old last March. As to the future, my plan is to keep on climbing, slowly, but surely, rising higher and higher on dead men's bones, until at the age of eighty-two, I can tell you in my report, 'the air and the light are very good up here.'"

McLAURIN JAMESON PICKERING.

Is a member of the firm of M. F. Pickering & Co., shipowners and commission merchants, with office in the Produce Exchange, New York. He writes: —

"There is little of interest to report. Am still engaged in the shipping business in this city. Am a member of the New York Harvard Club and the New York Yacht Club, and always pleased to meet old Harvard men, especially of '82."

WHIPPLE NAHUM POTTER.

Lives in Boston, and writes: —

"The last five years have been very quiet and uneventful, simply the routine of business here in Boston and care of my family, possibly excepting the recent trip, which was very interesting to me; namely, from New York to New Orleans by steamer, with a few days sight-seeing in New Orleans. I also went to Hot Springs and Little Rock, Ark.

"In regard to my family, would say that I still have four children, two boys and two girls, all very well and attending school."

Address, 34 Ames Building, Boston.

JOHN PRESTON.

Lives in New Ipswich, N.H., and writes that he is still unmarried, and since 1895 has spent most of his time as a teacher.

In 1899 and 1900 he has represented his town in the New Hampshire legislature, where he has been chairman of the Committee on Education.

WILLIAM LOWELL PUTNAM.

Is with his father and brother as the firm of Putnam & Putnam, lawyers, in the Ames Building, Boston, and writes: —

"Don't know that I have done anything interesting even to my classmates.

"Practising law here at the old stand. Wrote a short article on 'Fraudulent Imitation by Deceptive Use of one's own Name' for Harvard Law Review, October, 1898."

He has two sons and two daughters.

FREDERIC WILLIAM RHINELANDER.

Writes: —

"In 1891 I left Milwaukee, Wis., and have since been living in New York City, where I am occupied with the management of real estate and other property."

CHARLES MOEN RICE.

Is a lawyer at Worcester, Mass., and writes that he has nothing of importance to report, except that he has been engaged in the practice of the law.

GEORGE MOREY RICHARDSON.*

Born at Framingham, Mass., July 7, 1859.

Died at Athens, Greece, Dec. 11, 1896.

George Morey Richardson was the son of Charles and Ellen L. (Hayward) Richardson, his grandparents being Asa Richardson, an old Boston merchant, and Nathan Hayward, one of the founders of the present city of Brockton, which grew out of North Bridgewater in 1874.

Yours for '82,
Geo. M. Richardson.

Our classmate was born and passed his early years at Framingham; and, showing a remarkable love for books and an aptitude for learning, he began when quite young the study of the classics with the rector of his parish, and after that went for a year or two to St. Mark's School at Southboro. Having become more proficient than most boys of his age, he was taken abroad by his parents, and spent three years in studying modern languages; and, though he afterward devoted but little time to the study of German, was fully equipped for entering a German university in the autumn of 1882.

Coming back to this country, he fitted for college at Phillips Exeter Academy, and entered Harvard in 1878.

While in college, he was a member of the Institute of 1770, Harvard Union, St. Paul's Society, K. N., Philological Society, and of the Φ. B. K. His rank in the class at graduation was fifth, and he was one of the only two men in the class who received the highest honors in classics; and at Commencement he had an oration.

After graduation he spent five years in Europe, in travel and in study at the universities of Jena, Berlin, and Leipzig, receiving the degree of Ph.D. at the latter in 1886.

In June, 1887, he returned to America, and spent the next two years teaching at Harvard and at Radcliffe, taking the Latin courses of Professor Clement L. Smith during the Sabbatical year of the latter.

In June, 1889, he accepted a position with the University of California, and until his death was connected with that institution as instructor and professor of classical archæology.

In the early summer of 1896 he sailed for Europe on leave of absence for a year or more to pursue his studies and archæological investigations, and he began his work at the American School at Athens in the autumn. Here he fell ill with typhoid fever; and, in spite of all that medical skill and careful nursing could do, he died at Athens, Dec. 11, 1896, and was buried amid the surroundings that he loved so well. A cross of flowers was placed upon his grave in memory of the class of '82 by the sister of our late classmate, Alexander Boyd, who was studying at the American School at Athens at that time.

George Richardson was not alone a ripe scholar and an honored instructor, but he was a genial, lovable man; and his pleasant smile and cordial greeting were an inspiration to both old and young.

During the period of his work in California he came East every summer to be with his mother, and each year he came to our Commencement reunions with more devotion to the class than many a man who lived in Boston.

From early boyhood, he had spent his summers when in this country at Vineyard Haven, and he knew every point in the history and the traditions of the island; and, above all, he knew and loved the people, and many a kindly act endeared him to them, from the old sea captains down to the little children.

He had never married; but he left behind him a mother for whom he had the deepest love, and who was heart-broken by this loss of her only son.

By his will he left land in California to the university there, to found a prize to be given annually for the best translation of Classical English into Ciceronian Latin; and his books he divided between that university and the Harvard Library.

By the death of George Richardson we have all lost a friend, and Harvard has lost one of the most promising of her younger sons.

He was a man of charming personality and of deep scholarship, but his crowning virtue was his deep love of humanity.

HERBERT AUGUSTUS RICHARDSON.

He writes from Medfield, Mass.: —

"Have been in Medfield since 1892 with Edwin V. Mitchell & Co., manufacturers of straw goods. Was married Dec. 25, 1893, to Albina C. Jacobs, of Westboro, Mass. No children."

LUCIEN MOORE ROBINSON.

He writes from the Divinity School at 5000 Woodland Avenue, Philadelphia: —

"The last five years have been busy, uneventful years in my life. I am still teaching in the Divinity School here, where I hold the professorship of Liturgics and Ecclesiastical Polity. I am also a member of the faculties of the Deaconess House and the Delancey School, and hold various diocesan offices.

"My summers are spent in Maine, where I have become interested in local history, and was invited to deliver the oration at the centennial celebration of the incorporation of the town of Sumner, Me., in June, 1898. This address with some other historical sketches of mine has been published.

"As the years pass away and our class 'on this side' becomes ever smaller, my affection for it becomes stronger. May the All-Father richly bless every member of it!"

WILLIAM ARMSTRONG ROGERS.

Was formerly a lawyer in Cincinnati, Ohio, of the firm of Davison, Conway & Rogers, but has left that city; and none of his former associates can give any clew as to where he is or whether he is living or dead.

The Secretary has taken much pains in his endeavor to find Rogers, and would be glad to receive any information that would throw light on his whereabouts.

WILLIAM JOSEPH RUSHMORE.

Resigned from the position of principal of the high school at Ware, Mass., and lived in Cambridge, studying in the Graduate School, and taking the degree of A.M. in 1898. He now writes: —

"W. J. Rushmore is principal of the Dover (N.H.) High School, wherein he finds full scope for all the abilities he possesses.

"He has a lovely wife, a charming daughter, a delightful home, and is altogether a very happy man. He wishes as much, but could wish no more, for all the members of '82."

JOHN RUSSELL.

Writes from Plymouth, Mass.: —

"There is little to be said of interest to '82, in the Russell family. In number we are the same, and so far the junior members seem to be of ordinary intelligence and unusually disobedient.

"There are two of each kind, and I doubt if three of a kind would beat them. I sometimes do, but that makes a straight flush. I am running in the same old rut, and looking after other people's iron, cranberries, and money; and often in the last three years I have been glad that they were not my own.

"I believe the addition of a cow, a donkey, and a couple of hundred hens have made me an objectionable neighbor; but so far none of the adjoining premises have been deserted, for which I am sorry, as I always want all the land that joins me."

HENRY DWIGHT SEDGWICK.

Is a member of the law firm of Ludlow, Townsend & Sedgwick at 45 Cedar Street, New York, his partners being James B. Ludlow of '81 and John J. Townsend of '79.

He was married Nov. 7, 1895, to Miss Sarah M. Minturn; and his son, Henry Dwight Sedgwick, 3d, was born Sept. 6, 1896, and Robert Minturn Sedgwick, Jan. 27, 1899.

In June, 1896, Sedgwick received his degree of A.B. from Harvard as of the class of 1882.

HAROLD MARSH SEWALL.

Appointed by President McKinley, April 22, 1897, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Hawaii. Since the transfer of sovereignty, Aug. 12, 1898, has served as the special agent of the United States to conduct correspondence with the government of Hawaii.

Children born since last report: Arthur Sewall, 3d. at Honolulu, Feb. 28, 1898; Emma Kaiulani Sewall, at Honolulu, Sept. 25, 1899.

Address, Hale Kulani, Waikiki, Honolulu.

[Since the death of his father, Hon. Arthur Sewall, he has returned to his home at Bath, Me.]

HENRY HAMILTON SHERWOOD.

Is a member of the firm of Sherwood & Sherwood, importers and exporters at San Francisco, Cal.

Address, 212 Market Street.

HORACE EMMET SMITH.

Writes from Indianapolis: —

"Since the last report which I made to you, I have nothing to add, further than that I am still in the same office here, doing business under the firm name of Hawkins & Smith, at the same address as last given. I have my share of the business and no earthly reason to complain. There has been no change in my situation that would be of the slightest interest to the class, so far as I know. My wife is still living; and I have a comfortable residence, where I would be glad to see and entertain any of the class when they come through here, and to show them what we think is a handsome city.

"It is a source of regret to me that I have never been able to attend any of the triennial reunions of the class, and have never been able to go back for alumni day since 1883. This is occasioned by the fact that June is the very busiest month in the year in our business. The courts close down about the first of July, and what is technically known in Illinois as the 'short calendar,' which we style a little differently here, is heard, the result of which is that it is almost an impossibility for me to leave here in June.

"We have an Indiana Harvard Club established at this point, and have in the State a membership of about one hundred and fifty. The local membership here in the city is about forty, and during the past year there has been considerable interest. We have had monthly smokers at the University Club, and they have been very enjoyable. A number of Harvard men are here in the faculties of the local colleges; and there has been, in a way, a revival of feeling in that direction, which we expect to be of future benefit. Two members of the faculty have called upon us in the past year, and been entertained by us."

CHARLES ARMSTRONG SNOW.

Is a member of the firm of Burdett & Snow, lawyers, with office in the Ames Building, Boston.

He was married Jan. 28, 1899, to Fannie Devens Wallace.

He is a member of the Colonial Society of Massachusetts.

GEORGE FREDERICK SPAULDING.

Writes as follows to the Secretary in response to his request for facts and for dates of births of children: —

"Atherton was born Dec. 6, 1887, at Danbury, Conn. Rosamond was born July 16, 1891, at Brookline, Mass. Robert Edward was born Oct. 31, 1893. John Varnum was born Dec. 8, 1897. Margaret was born March 11, 1899,— the last three at Newton Centre.

"This is all I have to report, except to say that we are all sound and kind."

He is still in business in Boston, and lives in Newton Centre.

ELIOT DAWES STETSON.

Writes: —

"Continues practice of law. Address, New Bedford, Mass."

He forms with his brother, Fred. D. Stetson of '88, the law firm of Stetson & Stetson.

CHARLES HERBERT STEVENS.

Is connected with Charles C. Soule in the Boston Book Company, dealing mostly in law books, and in connection with his business has been one of the most extensive travellers in the class, being a veritable "globe-trotter."

He writes from New Orleans in April, 1900: —

"Your letter catches me here in New Orleans, and reminds me that, although I intended to answer your first one, it nevertheless escaped me.

"No, I have practically nothing new to report,— 'no marriages, births, or other honors.' Probably I have been obliged to jump to so many different quarters of the globe that they have so far missed me."

EDWARD KNIGHTS STEVENS.

He writes: —

"I have made no change in address or work since the last Class Report. I am still teaching in the Hale School, and am still a bachelor."

The Secretary believes that Stevens still considers Newport, R.I., his home, although he lives most of his time in Boston; and his school is at 86 Beacon Street in the latter city.

FREDERIC MATHER STONE.

Is a member of the law firm of Perkins & Stone in the Sears Building, Boston, and resides in Milton.

He was married at New Bedford, Dec. 31, 1896, to Miss Mary Luce Bryant, daughter of Herbert P. Bryant.

WILLIAM ENOS STONE.

Lives at Greensboro, N.C., and is treasurer and manager of the George Manufacturing Company, manufacturers of hosiery.

He is also president of the Board of Education of Greensboro.

JOHN HUMPHREYS STORER.

He writes: —

"Since the last Class Report I have been leading a quiet, uneventful life in Boston. My business has become almost entirely that of trustee and manager of property, especially real estate. I am treasurer of the Brooklyn Development Company.

"We have two more children, making six in all: Theodore Lyman Storer, born Aug. 30, 1896; and Lydia Lyman Storer, born May 9, 1899."

THOMAS CHANDLER THACHER.

Lives in Boston, and writes: —

"I have three children, my only son, Thomas Chandler Thacher, Jr., being born Aug. 12, 1896.

"On Feb. 1, 1897, my father retired from the wool business after an active mercantile career of fifty years. While my father still continues at present in business with my brother, a new firm was formed Feb. 1, 1897, under the name of T. C. Thacher & Co., consisting of Charles Woelfle and myself, our attention being given entirely to wool.

"I went abroad on business in 1896, 1897, and 1898.

"My office is 16 Pearl Street, as formerly, where I am always glad to see and welcome any of my classmates."

ROLAND THAXTER.

Is assistant professor of cryptogamic botany at Harvard, and writes: —

"Still living in Norton's Woods, and teaching school in H. U.

"Elizabeth, born June 30, 1894; Edmund Lincoln, born Feb. 17, 1900."

He is a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

GEORGE WARREN TOWNE.

Writes: —

"I have held the position of instructor of mathematics in the Salem High School, Salem, Mass., since the last Class Report."

He lives in the near-by town of Topsfield.

STEPHEN VAN RENSSELAER TOWNSEND.

Is of the firm of Townsend & McIlvaine, lawyers, at 45 Cedar Street, New York, and writes: —

"I am practising law still at above address.

"My wife, Janet King Townsend, died Aug. 19, 1899. Since the last Report our daughter, Justine Van Rensselaer, was born, Jan. 2, 1896.

"I have held no public offices."

[Since this Report was put in the hands of the printer, the Secretary has heard with sorrow of the death of Townsend on Jan. 15, 1901, in New York.]

GUSTAVUS TUCKERMAN.

Is rector of St. Stephen's Mission Church in St. Louis.

He was married Oct. 17, 1896, to Miss Katharine Lowndes Maury, daughter of William Maury, of St. Louis, and has three children, Cornelia Field, Gustavus and Laura Bumstead.

EDWARD LIVINGSTON UNDERWOOD.

He lives in Canton, Mass., and writes: —

"I am still engaged in teaching at the Hopkinson Private School in Boston; and, with the exception of membership in various Masonic bodies, patriotic societies, and local boards of government of the town in which I live, I have attained no distinction worth mentioning."

His three children, Edward, Helen and Robert, had their names changed by decree of the Norfolk County Probate Court, Oct. 18, 1899, from Underwood to Dana; and our classmate writes: "As I was adopted at an early age, after the death of my father, by my step-father, William Earl Underwood, M.D., I received his name. My children, however, now legally bear the name of their grandfather, which was Dana."

WILLIAM CUSHING WAIT.

Is a member of the law firm of Elder, Wait & Whitman at 7 Water Street, Boston, and lives in Medford.

He writes: —

"Very little has happened to me since the last Report in 1895.

"My name is unchanged; my nature substantially the same; my occupation still that of an attorney; and my place of business (at least until the first of June) in the Ames Building, Boston. I am still associated with Samuel J. Elder, Yale '73, and Edmund A. Whitman, Harvard '81.

"In public matters I have served on the School Committee and as a commissioner of sinking funds in Medford, and have been a candidate for mayor of the place, receiving a majority of votes in half the city, but not enough to elect me. I still belong to numerous societies, and am president, until the third Wednesday in March, of the Medford Historical Society, and chairman of the Executive Committee of the Massachusetts Reform Club.

"I am generally so important a character that I have spent very large sums of money to have my pictures inserted in numerous volumes so expensive I dare not take them home."

His office is now in the Winthrop Building on Water Street.

GUY WARING.

In November, 1896, he left Calumet, and returned to Winthrop in Okanogan County, Wash., where he has a general store, grist-mill, etc.

Waring called on the Secretary a year or two ago, and showed him some photographs of the superb scenery surrounding his home.

In one picture was seen a grand snow-capped mountain at the head of the valley. This mountain had never had a name before Waring arrived in the country; and he had named it Mount Gardner in honor of our late classmate, and the name has been adopted by the Government Survey.

HENRY ELDRIDGE WARNER.

Is a member of the firm of J. B. & H. E. Warner, lawyers at 53 State Street, Boston, and writes: —

"I think of nothing to say for the Class Report, except that I am still practising law in above firm, and am living on my farm in Lincoln. Jan. 1, 1900, I was appointed referee in bankruptcy for Middlesex County by Judge Lowell, and I am holding that office now."

His first wife died Feb. 1, 1897, and June 14, 1900, he married Miss Henrietta Edla Slade, daughter of the late Dr. Daniel Denison Slade, of the class of 1844.

FREDERIC WARREN.

Is a member of the firm of Warren & Co., commission merchants and steamship agents of Liverpool, England, and Boston, Mass.

He resides in Boston.

FREDERIC LEONARD WASHBURN.

Received an A.M. at Harvard in 1895. Is professor of biology at the University of Oregon, situated in the town of Eugene in that State. He writes: —

"I have done considerable work for the United States Fish Commission and for the State in an effort to introduce and propagate Eastern oysters on the Oregon coast.

"Our State legislature in 1899 created the office of State Biologist, and the governor made me his first appointee. I do not wear a uniform. I have made no gift of free libraries during the last five years. I believe it is a sin to die rich."

* PHILIP WASHBURN.

Born at Worcester, Mass., Aug. 2, 1861.

Died at Denver, Col., Oct. 6, 1898.

Philip (Moen) Washburn was the son of the late Charles F. Washburn, of Worcester, and a member of a large and prominent family of that place. There he passed his early years, and fitted for college at the high school.

He entered Harvard with us in the autumn of 1878, and throughout the four years was a widely known and popular member of the class, prominent alike in his studies and in social life.

He was a member of the Institute of 1770, D. K. E., Hasty Pudding Club, A. D. Φ., the St. Paul's, Historical and Natural History Societies, Harvard Union, and was at one time an editor of the Echo. He was one of the very few men of the class who, as an undergraduate, was an effective speaker at class meetings or on other public occasions.

The year after graduation he spent at the Union Theological Seminary in New York City; and on June 5, 1883, he married Miss Miriam Phillips Storrs, the youngest daughter of the Rev. Dr. Richard S. Storrs, of Brooklyn, and immediately sailed for Europe, where he spent over two years in study. For two semesters he was a student at the Friedrich-Wilhelm University in Berlin, and the following year at Cambridge, England.

Returning to this country, he was in November, 1885, ordained a priest in the Protestant Episcopal Church, and was made assistant rector of all Saints' Parish in Worcester. In 1887 he became rector of St. John's Church, at Northampton, Mass., where he remained for six years, doing splendid work in his parish and exercising a powerful influence for good among the young men. Through his efforts a gymnasium was built in the city, and by his presence and example he encouraged athletic sports and healthful exercise, and to his last years kept up his fondness for the game of base-ball. He served for a time on the School Committee of Northampton.

Yours faithfully,

Philip Washburn.

He had been troubled for many years with weak lungs, and in 1893 he felt that he could no longer live in the severe climate of New England; and he resigned his pastorate, and, after a little time in the Adirondacks, removed to Colorado Springs. There he was chosen rector of St. Stephen's Church, which had been recently organized; and he continued in his work till July, 1898, when his failing health compelled him to resign this charge, and his parish, with great regret and sorrow, felt obliged for his sake to accept his resignation. During his rectorship he worked indefatigably for his parish, and had the satisfaction of seeing it prosper; but the earnestness with which he entered into everything told upon his health.

He was a trustee of Colorado College, and in every sense he merited the name given him of "the student's friend"; and his addresses to the students, couched in language that reached the heart, will long be remembered by all who heard them.

His death, which occurred at Denver on Oct. 6, 1898, came suddenly as the result of a hemorrhage. His wife and three of his five daughters survived him. Some few years before his death he dropped his middle name of Moen.

In June, 1900, a window to his memory was placed in the church at Northampton, but the greatest tribute to his memory was the love and affection which his classmates, his parishioners, and his friends everywhere bore for him, for he had a warm place in the hearts of people of all classes; and his high intellectuality and deep spirituality gave him a power for good in the community such as is enjoyed by few.

[In 1899 Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Washburn gave to the University the sum of two thousand dollars for the establishment of a prize in memory of her son, Philip Washburn, of the class of 1882. On this foundation an annual prize of seventy-five dollars is offered for the best thesis, of sufficient merit, on an historical subject presented by a successful candidate for honors in history or in political science, whose main work is in history.—From Harvard Catalogue, 1900–01.]

JOHN SYDNEY WEBB.

Is a lawyer with office in the Davidson Building, 1413 G Street, Washington, D.C. He writes: —

"In the March Century of 1898 appears an article entitled 'The River Trip to the Klondike' by my gifted pen, and tells all that I know that is new or interesting of the happenings to me. The chances are I shall go again this summer (1900). If so, we shall reverse the journey, going over the pass, down the river, and up to Nome."

JAMES EDWARD WELD.

Is a lawyer in Bryant Building, 55 Liberty Street, New York.

He has been twice elected president of the University Glee Club of New York City, which has fifty-two members.

He is general counsel of the City Improvement Society of New York City, formed "to promote the improvement and beautifying of the city, and stimulate the authorities in enforcing the laws relating to such objects."

The Secretary would add that Weld is the most enthusiastic member of the class in his attendance at Commencement, and that a class dinner would hardly be a class dinner if Weld were not present to sing one of his inimitable songs.

EVERT JANSEN WENDELL.

Lives in New York City, and writes: —

"Since 1895 my life has been more and more busy, which is the experience, I fancy, of every member of the class.

"Up to the time of my father's death in May, 1898, I had been for some years associated with him in his private business, exclusive of his firm interests; and since that time my duties as one of the trustees of the estate have constituted my basic occupation.

"In addition, I am on several boards of managers, notably those of the House of Refuge on Randall's Island, and of the New York Juvenile Asylum. I am also one of the trustees of the George Junior Republic at Freeville, N.Y., and a member of the Board of Trustees of the Cuban Orphan Society.

"I have taken much interest in several of the boys' clubs in New York, and have been associated a good deal with the work of the Children's Aid Society in rescuing homeless children from the slums and having them placed in homes in the West or somewhere away from the city.

"My interest in theatricals is as great as when in college; and, in addition to acting a good deal for charities or with the Amateur Comedy Club, I have given some attention to the gradual accumulation of a dramatic library, of which I am becoming somewhat proud as it increases and expands.

"In athletics I referee, judge, and time quite often during the season; and in the summer of 1899 I had the honor of being chosen chairman of the Harvard-Yale Graduate Committee which had charge of the negotiations for the dual meet with Oxford and Cambridge, accompanying the team to England, and staying with them throughout the entire trip.

"I also took a trip to Europe and the Mediterranean in 1897, visiting Italy, Egypt, Palestine, Turkey, and Greece, all for the second time.

"For clubs, etc., I belong to the University, the Players', the Century Association, the Harvard, the Amateur Comedy, the University Athletic, and the New York Athletic; and also to the Holland, New England, and St. Nicholas Societies. Of the latter society, I am one of the stewards.

"I try to keep in touch with Harvard, never missing Class Day or Commencement, and taking in as many games and races in which she is engaged as I possibly can. The Harvard interest continues to be, as it always has been, one of the happiest parts of my life."

ELMER ELLSWORTH WENTWORTH.

He writes: —

"At the time of issuance of Class Report No. IV. I was rattling about in the 'settee' of rhetoric and English language and literature, Vassar College.

"In June, 1897, I resigned, and in October removed to Lakewood, N.J., where I had the pleasure of falling in with Merritt and of showing him how golf is not (usually) played on the Lakewood Club links.

"In January, 1899, I came to York, to become principal of the York County Academy, a boys' school, now more than a hundred years old. Two boys are now nearly fitted for Harvard, brands plucked from the burning at U. P. or Princeton, and I have hopes.

"Except for these changes of place, my life has been uneventful, and I have to chronicle only the paradox that, though I have grown less tall than in 1882, my head is growing above my hair.

"Address, York County Academy, York, Pa."

ISAAC SPALDING WHITING.

He is connected with his father's firm of D. Whiting & Sons, large milk contractors at Wilton, N.H., and Boston.

He writes: —

"There is but one thing to say, and that is that I am in business. I am doing but little in Worcester, but for several years I have practically managed the grain department of my father's varied affairs. Of late, too, I have worked a good deal in the milk department in Boston. I have moved to Somerville to live for that purpose, and seem likely to spend more and more time in it. My boy, Harvey A., was born in Worcester, Oct. 4, 1891, and died there of diphtheria, Nov. 20, 1893. My wife took the disease from him, from the effects of which she was stricken with paralysis in July, 1894, and has not recovered. My daughter Isabel was born in Lowell, July 11, 1894. My address is Wilton, N.H."

RUSSELL WHITMAN.

"Since 1895 I have continued to practise law in Chicago, but have removed my residence to Winnetka, a northerly suburb of the city on the Lake Shore, where a considerable number of Harvard men are now living.

"As to degrees taken, one of the law schools in Chicago has presented me with that of LL.B., in return, perhaps, for lectures on Trademarks and Copyright which I delivered before its students. I am a member of the Board of Managers of the Chicago Bar Association.

"Children born: Sarah Whitman, May 12, 1896; and Winslow Whitman, Jan. 23, 1899. On Feb. 10, 1898, I lost a daughter, Anna Winslow, who lived but a few days.

"The vicissitudes of the practice of the law in Chicago are sufficiently absorbing as they occur to keep one busy and contented; but they afford little matter of interest to others, even to classmates. As indicated by my lectures, I have made something of a study of Trademark law, and yet I would hardly call it my specialty. I have noticed that, if a lawyer speaks of making any branch of the law his specialty, his brother practitioners, while not always careful to see that he gets his full share of the specialty, are very solicitous that, at all events, he shall not be tempted into outside matters. Hence great caution should be exercised in speaking of specialties. I find my most interesting work is in connection with questions which arise as to whether certain instruments in writing were the last wills and testaments of various ladies and gentlemen who have passed away. There seems to be a good deal of dramatic accompaniment to cases of this kind, as the evidence takes a wider range than is usually allowed in legal proceedings; and the seamy side of human nature shows itself with interesting, if with discouraging, plainness.

"I trust no classmates 'go through here' without letting some of us know about it; yet I sometimes fear this may happen. At least, I hope that in future no '82 man will come here without letting it be known. He will find we can round up many of his friends at surprisingly short notice. I count at least thirteen or fourteen '82 men who live here. Can any other class make a larger showing in Chicago?"

He is vice-president of the Harvard Club of Chicago.

SAMUEL WILLISTON.

He writes: —

"I was appointed professor of law in the Harvard Law School as of Sept. 1, 1895, after having served five years as assistant professor. A few months later I had a severe nervous breakdown from overwork. I have had a slow and somewhat checkered convalescence, and have not yet fully recovered my health. For nearly three years I was away from home most of the time, spending the winters in Western New York, Bermuda, Virginia, and California, and the summers in New Hampshire. In October, 1898, I took up some work in the Law School, and am now giving instruction there.

"My family has had neither additions nor subtractions since the last Secretary's report. We are living on Belmont Street, Belmont."

OWEN WISTER.

Is a lawyer in Philadelphia. April 21, 1898, he married Mary Channing Wister, his third cousin, and has one daughter, Mary Channing, born Sept. 20, 1899.

He was poet for the Φ. B. K. at Cambridge in 1899.

FREDERICK CLINTON WOODBURY.*

Born in Boston, March 25, 1861.
Died in Boston, Dec. 5, 1886.
See Report III., page 83.

HERBERT GRAFTON WOODWORTH.

Is a member of the tea importing firm of Robinson & Woodworth of Boston. He writes to the Secretary as follows: —

"And now we have advanced to the venerable position where it is quite possible that sons of '82 may this year be entering college. As a class, we have not sought this honor; but it has been thrust upon us.

"For myself, not much need be said. In 1897 I was appointed one of the United States Government Board of Tea Experts, under the act of Congress in that year, to prevent the importation of impure and unwholesome tea; and each succeeding year I have been reappointed.

"I spent the winter and spring of 1898 travelling in Europe with my family; but, although this incident in my career followed upon the other, a glance at my official salary would convince the most incredulous that it did not proceed from it."

JOSEPH RUGGLES WORCESTER.

He writes: —

"My life since 1895 has been uneventful. Have continued in the same business as a consulting engineer, making a specialty of steel construction, with my office at 53 State Street. In the summer of 1899, the business outgrowing the capacity of my Boston office, I built an office building on my place at Waltham, with accommodations for about ten draughtsmen.

"My most important work has been the train-shed of the South Union Station and the Boston Elevated Railway elevated structure.

"The only changes in my family since the last Report have been in the birth of a son, Thomas, June 8, 1896, and of a daughter, Ruth Hunt, July 2, 1898."

TEMPORARY MEMBERS.

HERBERT AUSTIN.

Belonged with the class of 1881. He writes to the Secretary of that class: —

"I am still in the firm of Austin & Doten, iron and steel merchants, formerly F. B. Austin & Co., North Street, Boston.

"In May, 1892, I had the great misfortune of losing my wife. I have no children. I passed the winter of 1996–97 in the Hawaiian Islands, where I went on private business."

CHARLES SIDNEY AVERILL.*

Born at Middleton, Mass., Feb. 9, 1859.
Died at Middleton, Mass., May 17, 1885.
See Report III., page 84.

RENÉ BACHE.

Lives in Washington, D.C., and writes: —

"Since 1895 my life-work, which is that of a writer, has carried me almost wholly out of newspaper employment, and into the magazine and weekly periodicals. I have been exceedingly successful in this new kind of labor, which I consider the most charming avocation imaginable. My expectation is that I will pursue it so long as I am able to hold a pen, though I should live to a hundred."

The Secretary would add that Bache's weekly letters to the Boston Transcript, on natural history or scientific subjects and in the lines of investigation pursued at the Smithsonian Institution are among the most interesting articles that appear in that valuable newspaper.

GEORGE EDWIN BACHELDER.

Belonged to the class of 1881.
See their Reports.

He has been a lawyer at Amesbury, Mass., but in the fall of 1895 moved to Urbana, Ohio, to take charge of a woollen mill there, but spends his summers in Amesbury.

CHARLES HAMMATT BARTLETT.

Lives in Bangor, Me., and writes: —

"Although I cannot write you anything of interest about myself for the past five years, yet I can answer your inquiry promptly, which you will appreciate much more.

"I am still in the law here, and lead a very humdrum life. I suppose I am called a 'reading man,' as I find myself usually with a book when I have leisure, although I shall have to confess that I play golf. I am on several boards where they want some one to work without remuneration, and have never had any political 'plums,' although one narrow escape from one several years ago gives me a shudder now.

"To sum up, I never took a degree, never received honors, and the only office of importance (to me) which I hold is my law office. I often compare my practice to a country store, where you have a little of everything and cannot make a specialty of anything."

CHARLES WESLEY BIRTWELL.

Received his degree of A.B. at Harvard in 1885. He is general secretary of the Boston Children's Aid Society.

The Secretary copies the following account from the Report of the class of 1885, just issued: —

"Coeditor with Anna Garlin Spencer of 'The Care of Dependent, Neglected, and Wayward Children, being a Report of the Second Section of the International Congress of Charities, Correction, and Philanthropy, Chicago, June, 1893. Baltimore: The Johns Hopkins Press; London: The Scientific Press. 1894.'

"Coeditor with George A. Walton of 'Report of the State Board of Education,' by special order of the legislature of Massachusetts, 'relative to School Attendance and Truancy, House Document No. 1259, May, 1897.'

"President of the Monday Evening Club, a club of paid officers of the charities of Boston and vicinity, November, 1893, to November, 1895.

"Member of the Board of Directors of the New England Watch and Ward Society, March, 1894, to May, 1900.

"Director of the 'Student Volunteer Charity Work,' Harvard University, since the organization of the Student Volunteer Committee, October, 1894.

"Member of the 'Advisory Board on Public Institutions of the City of Boston, appointed by the Mayor,' July, 1896, to May, 1897.

"President of the Channing Club of Boston, October, 1896, to October, 1897.

"An associate editor of the Charities Review since March, 1897.

"Secretary of the Unitarian Club of Boston since January, 1899."

Address, 43 Charity Building, Chardon Street, Boston.

Residence, Druce Road, Brookline.

Have subsequently been advanced through intermediate offices in the grand bodies until reaching that of Grand Senior Warden of the Grand Encampment of Independent Order of Odd Fellows, which I now hold; Representative in Grand Lodge of Ancient Order of United Workmen; Supreme Representative in Supreme Lodge of Workmen's Benefit Association; now out of offices in the two last-named orders. In spring of 1899 was appointed chairman of special joint committee of Grand Lodge and Grand Encampment of Independent Order of Odd Fellows, to organize and conduct public celebration of the anniversary of the Order, held on June 7, 1899, and which was the largest and most successful ever held in southern New England. In March, 1901, expect to become Grand Patriarch of Grand Encampment of Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

A daughter, Martha Delilah, was born Sept. 14, 1895.

JAMES JOSEPH DOOLING.

Has not been heard from.

He has given up the catering business in Boston, and the Secretary has not been able to locate him.

A former associate said he was clerk in a hotel in New York State, somewhere near Ticonderoga.

HILAND HULBURD DUNLEVY.

Married May Lorimer, daughter of the Rev. George C. Lorimer, D.D. Children, Lorimer, Sarah, and Edith.

Is a lawyer, and is conducting a farm at Spring Lake, Mich.

CHARLES HAMLIN DUNTON.

Is a dealer in art photographs and other pictures at 298 Boylston Street, Boston.

CLINTON JOHNSON EDGERLY.

After the death of his father a few years ago Edgerly lost the position of agent for New York of the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance of Springfield, and was for a time one of the agents of the New York Life Insurance.

He does not reply to the Secretary, and his present address is not known.

FREDERICK LARNAC ELDRIDGE.

He writes from New York: —

"My life for the last four or five years has not been particularly eventful.

"In 1889, as I have before informed you, I was elected secretary of the Knickerbocker Trust Company of this city, and held that position until last summer, when I was elected first vice-president of the company, which position I am now occupying."

DANIEL BUTLER FEARING.

His residence is Newport, R.I.; and in the spring of 1900 he wrote the following to the Secretary: —

"In 1891 I was elected school commissioner of the city of Newport, R.I., to fill an unexpired term. In 1892–93 I was elected alderman from the fifth and fourth wards of Newport respectively. In 1894 I was elected mayor of the city, holding office one year.

"In 1895 my wife and I made a trip abroad, returning in April, 1897. Starting on Oct. 2, 1897, we made another trip around the world, returning home in April, 1898.

"In 1898 I was elected Junior Warden of St. John's Lodge No. 1, A. F. & A. M. of Newport, R.I. In 1899 I was Senior Warden, and occupied that position during the celebration of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the lodge.

"This year, 1900, I have had the honor of becoming Worshipful Master of this, one of the oldest lodges in the history of Free Masonry in the United States.

"I am now returning slowly home from a winter on the Nile and in Egypt."

EDWIN THAYER FEARING.

Is a member of the firm of Fearing, Whiton & Co., commission merchants in cotton duck, twine, and cordage, at 91 and 93 Commercial Street, Boston, and lives in Newton, Mass.

EDWARD ASHLEY FERGUSON.

Is in the life insurance business in Chicago, and writes: —

"In March, 1894, I was appointed general manager for the West of the Nederland Life Insurance Company of Holland. Early in 1897 this company discontinued issuing new policies; and I then received appointment as Chicago manager for the Union Central of Ohio, retaining my connection as Western manager for the Nederland, still having full charge of their business in the West, which was already in force when they discontinued accepting new business."

Address, 202 Reliance Building.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS GRIFFIN.*

Born in Malden, Mass., March 19, 1859.
Died in Roxbury (Boston), Mass., March 31, 1887,

ALMON WHITING GRISWOLD.

A.B. 1881. Belonged to that class.
See their Reports.

RAMON BENJAMIN GUITERAS.

Is an M.D. in New York City, and writes: —

"I can give you only a few lines concerning my life during the past five years, as it has been uneventful.

"I have practised and taught surgery, and occasionally put on the gloves. The pleasantest feature of the past five years was the class dinner in Boston last June. As I understand that they are all equally enjoyable, I shall make it a point never to miss another one while I am so near Boston as I am at present."

And the Secretary would add that he now is Ramon Guiteras, having dropped his middle name.

PERCIVAL SMITH HILL.

Lives in New York City, and writes: —

"In the fall of 1894 I became connected with Blackwell's Durham Tobacco Company. Was elected assistant secretary and director in 1896, vice-president in 1897, and president in 1900. In the spring of 1899 our Durham offices were moved to New York; and in December, 1899, I was elected secretary of the American Tobacco Company, and a director of that company in March, 1900. I have been obliged to move my family from the Quaker City to Gotham. No change has taken place in the number or condition of my family, except that we are all growing older."

FRANCIS MARION HOLDEN.

Belonged with the class of '80.

See the Reports of that class.

Received the degree of M.D. from Harvard, 1884. Lives in Philadelphia, and has given up medicine, and is a member of the Stock Exchange there.

CHARLES HARVEY HOLMAN.

He is now C. Vey Holman, and sends to the Secretary in May, 1900, from Bangor, Me., the following sketch: —

"C. Vey Holman from 1890 to 1892 owned and edited the Woburn (Mass.) Daily City Press. Spent eleven months in Europe, September, 1889, to August, 1890. Visited the Orient in 1895, going up the Nile and as far east as Jerusalem, returning via Constantinople and Athens. For fifteen years has spent the summer season at his summer home, Holman Oaks, Rockland, Me., travelling most winters. Has engaged actively in politics, stumping in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Maine, and New York in the Presidential campaign in 1892; and in 1896 devoted most of the summer and fall months to political work. Was in that year delegate from Maine to the National Democratic Convention at Chicago, where served on Committee on Platform, being a signer of the dissenting minority report, and later an active organizer of the Palmer and Buckner 'gold standard' Democratic movement. Was chosen National Committeeman from Maine at the Indianapolis Convention of 1896, and served throughout the campaign as member of the Executive Committee and chief of the Literary Bureau of the National Democratic party, with headquarters at the Palmer House. Was nominated in 1896 for State Senator of Maine from Knox County,— first and only candidacy for public office.

"Now a resident of New York, living at the Holland House, Fifth Avenue and 30th Street. Member of the Reform, Democratic, and Seneca Clubs of New York City. Married Oct. 19, 1886, Miss Minnie F. Ross, daughter of John and Mary Ross, of Bangor, Me. No children. Actively engaged in various business enterprises, from harvesting ice in Maine to mining gold in Alaska. In politics, a free-trade, gold-standard, anti-imperialistic Democrat. Without religious preferences or prejudices, believing humbly in the Universal Fatherhood of God and the limitless, loving Brotherhood of Christ. The latch-string of hospitality is always out at Holman Oaks for men of '82, than whom no better associates can be found between the poles."

FRANK WHITEHOUSE HOWE.

Lives at 85 Fairmount Street in Lowell, Mass., and is engaged in the lumber business with other members of his family as the Howe Lumber Company at 698 Dutton Street.

WILLIAM ADDISON HOWE.

Belonged with the class of '81.

See Reports of that class.

Is a dealer in general merchandise at Carlton, Ore.

WOODBURY KANE.

Lives in New York City.

During the Spanish War he rendered valued service to his country as first lieutenant and later captain in Troop K of the First Regiment United States Volunteer Cavalry, better known as the "Rough Riders," and was in the skirmish of Las Guasimas, June 24, 1898, and the battle of San Juan, July 1.

COURTENAY LANGDON.

Writes from Providence, R.I. —

"The little I have to report is as follows: In 1898 I was made full professor of the Romance Language and Literature at Brown University.

"My children are: Chauncy Taft, born Dec. 24, 1895; Robert Courtenay, born Aug. 18, 1897; Henry Gordon Taft, born July 29, 1899."

PRESCOTT LAWRENCE.

Lives in New York City in winter and Newport in summer.

He is prominent in the management of the New York Horse Show.

Address Newport, R.I.

CLINTON HILL LORD.*

Born at Casco, Me., June 5, 1859.
Died at Newton, Mass., Jan. 30, 1880.
See Report I., page 88.

CHARLES WASHINGTON LUCK.

Lives in Weiser, Idaho, and writes: —

"After an unpardonable delay, I send you a few lines about myself, perhaps too late for your use in the Class Report. Possibly my neglect has been the expression of an undefined feeling that I am so far out of the world in which you and most of the fellows live that the little things that have happened to me would be of little interest to others.

"I am still a Congregational home missionary in a growing little town of the roomy and hopeful West. The sort of work in which I am engaged is useful, but inconspicuous. It is foundation work, a trifle rough, often hard, not beautiful, but necessary.

"My wife is living. We have four children. You have the names of the two oldest. The others are: Margery, born Sept. 29, 1889; and Dorothy, born Aug. 31, 1893.

"If any of the fellows ever come this way, it would be a pleasure to meet them. I haven't seen a Harvard man for years."

He received his degree of A.B. at Harvard in 1889.

See Reports of that class.

EDGAR WILLIAM McCOLL.

Belonged with the class of '81.

See Reports of that class.

He lives at Spokane, Wash., and in 1898 was a clerk for the firm of Jackson & Jackson of that city.

CHARLES HERBERT McFEE.

He writes: —

"I am still engaged in the practice of the law in Woonsocket, in partnership with George W. Greene, of Boston University, under the firm name of McFee & Greene.

"Since last report I have been assistant justice of the district court here.

"I was married for the second time in 1898, to Francesca C. Mertz of this city."

CHARLES HENRY MAHON.

The Secretary has not been able to find Mahon. At last accounts he was a shoe manufacturer at Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada.

ERNEST HOMER MARIETT.

He has dropped his middle name of Homer, and is now known as Ernest Mariett.

Since 1895 has been rector of Church of the Messiah, Wood's Holl, Mass., for nearly two years. Studied a year, 1897–98, in Harvard Graduate School, and became rector of Church of the Ascension, New Haven, Oct. 1, 1898. Present address, 32 Park Street, New Haven. Spent summer of 1899 in study at Oxford, England, and in London, studying work of the Church in slums of South London.

CHARLES ANDREWS MITCHELL.

A.B. Harvard, 1881.

See Reports of that class.

He lives at Cleveland, Ohio, where he is principal of the University School.

JOHN KEARSLEY MITCHELL.

Belonged with the class of '81.

He received the degree of M.D. from the University of Pennsylvania, and is a practising physician in Philadelphia.

SOLLACE MITCHELL.

Is a physician at Jacksonville, Fla. His first wife died April 6, 1896; and on Nov. 8, 1899, he was married at Lockport, N.Y., to Miss Florence Terry, daughter of Frank Hamilton Terry, of that city.

HENRY WHITNEY MUNROE.

Is a member of the banking firm of John Munroe & Co. in New York and Munroe & Co. in Paris, France.

He writes that he spends most of his time in New York, paying a visit to Paris every year.

He has three sons and one daughter.

HUGH KINSLEY NORMAN.*

Hugh Kinsley Norman, the eldest son of the late George H. Norman, of Newport, R.I., and Boston, Mass., was born in Newport, Jan. 27, 1862, and died at Providence, R.I., of acute laryngitis, on the morning of Tuesday, Oct. 30, 1900.

Norman entered college with our class in the autumn of 1878, and left college at the close of the Freshman year.

He lived mostly in Boston and Newport, and for a time was associated with his father in putting systems of water-works into various cities and towns, and personally superintended this work in Gloucester and in Beverly, and possibly other places, but for several years past has lived on his farm on the island of Rhode Island, just outside of Newport.

During the Spanish War he and three of his brothers volunteered their services, and received commissions in the United States Navy; and our classmate was lieutenant, and served as navigator and later as executive officer on the supply ship "Glacier." He received his commission in June, 1898, and honorable discharge March, 1899.

He was married at Gloucester, Mass., Oct. 27, 1886, to Miss Dorothy Spring Prindall, of that city, who survives him; but he had no children.

RICHARD CHAPPELL PARSONS.

He writes the following short sketch from the embassy of the United States at Rome, Italy: —

"On Feb. 11, 1898, Mr. Parsons was appointed by President McKinley second secretary of the United States embassy at Rome, Italy. He still occupies that position."

His home address is Cleveland, Ohio.

WILLIAM HERBERT PRESCOTT.

Is a physician in Boston, and writes: —

"I send a short account of my life since the last Report.

"My only child, Helen, was born Feb. 20, 1897.

"I was appointed medical director of public institutions in Boston in December 1896. I was the agent of the Massachusetts Volunteer Aid Association at Montauk Point, and became an acting assistant surgeon in the United States Army during the war with Spain. I am assistant in clinical medicine at the Harvard Medical School, and treasurer of several medical societies."

In June, 1900, he was elected treasurer of the Harvard Medical Alumni Association.

FREDERICK HENRY PRINCE.

Is the senior partner of the firm of F. H. Prince & Co., bankers and stock brokers in Boston.

Lives in Boston in winter, and in summer and autumn at his estate, "Princemere," which is composed of several hundred acres in and around the Chebacco Ponds at Wenham, Mass.

HAZEN KIMBALL RICHARDSON.

Received his A.B. at Harvard in 1886. Lives in Middleton, Mass., where he has quite a large farm, keeping, at least, one hundred cows.

He is chairman of the School Committee of the town.

He is married, and has three children.

HUBERT ST. PIERRE RUFFIN.*

Born in Boston, Feb. 10, 1859.
Died in Boston, March 29, 1891.
Belonged with the class of '81. See the Reports of that class.

EDWARD DAVID SCOTT.

Is a doctor of medicine in Washington, and writes: —

"I am still located in Washington, D.C., practising my profession. My patients are many, my collections moderate; yet a great measure of contentment is mine."

ARCHIBALD LOWERY SESSIONS.

Received degree of A.B. at Harvard, 1883. See Reports of that class.

Is a lawyer in New York City, and lives in Brooklyn.

Married a daughter of Bishop F. D. Huntington, of Central New York.

HENRY SHIPPEN.*

Born at Worcester, Mass., Dec. 22, 1859.
Died at Jamaica Plain, Mass., July 28, 1879.

DENISON ROGERS SLADE.

Belonged with the class of '81.

See their Reports.

His home is Chestnut Hill, Mass., but he spends much time on his farm at Squam Lake, N.H. (P.O. address, Centre Harbor).

He is interested in historical research, and is the author of many papers and magazine articles on the history of New England.

CHARLES INCHES STURGIS.

"To reply to your circular of February 10, received to-day: —

"I have two children, boys; Robert Shaw Sturgis, born April 4, 1894; Frank Noble Sturgis, born Jan. 9, 1897.

"In addition to the above the only 'honor received' is the truly great one of having been elected, last December, president of the Harvard Club of Chicago.

"This is indeed a great honor for one of '82's numerous temporary members' who never got degrees. It shows that our interest in Harvard matters was not dimmed by the ingloriousness of the ending of our college courses, even though the Graduates' Magazine (which is otherwise O. K.) insists in using brackets after our names, thus ['82], as a gentle reminder that there are others better than we are. However, let that pass."

WILLIAM ELDREDGE THAYER.

"I have very little that is new to communicate in regard to myself or my fortunes since 1895.

"I am still with the Prang Educational Company of Boston, whose place of business is at 110 Boylston Street. I hold position as director and secretary of Board of Directors of the company as well as cashier, and also do a little business in the firm of W. E. & W. P. Thayer, manufacturers of proprietary medicines.

"Have been tied pretty close to Boston, having many cares, both business and personal, to keep me at home, but am happy, in good health, and feel still young in spite of 'silver threads among the gold.'

"Have changed my place of residence from Dorchester to Weymouth, Mass."

FRANK HARRISON THOMPSON.

Has not been heard from.

EDWARD JAMES TILTON.*

Born at North Hampton, N.H., June 20, 1859.
Died at Andover Mass., April, 17, 1896.

Belonged to the class of 1885. See their Report IV., page 54.

Edward James Tilton was the son of James Seavey Tilton, and fitted for Harvard at Phillips Academy, Andover, where he graduated in 1878. He then spent a year in study with Dr. Allen at Richford, N.Y., and was with our class for a time; but ill-health compelled him to give up his studies for some years, but he returned to Harvard, and joined the class of 1885 in its Sophomore year, and graduated with them. After graduation he pursued his studies at the Harvard Medical School with some interruptions, availing himself of some hospital residence and practice, and travelling abroad with a patient. He received his degree of M.D. in 1894, and settled at Newton, Mass.,

He was married June 30, 1889, to Miss Mary Azuba Wheeler of Concord.

He was never of robust health, and died April 17, 1896, of anæmia.

CHARLES EVERETT TORREY.

Has been located for the last ten years at Orange, Orange County, Cal.

GEORGE MACBETH TRENHOLM.

Belonged with the class of '81. See their Reports. Is a lawyer at Charleston, S.C.

GEORGE CHRYSTIE VAN BENTHUYSEN.*

CHARLES MICHAEL VAN BUREN.

Belonged with the class of '81. See their Reports.
Is a lawyer at Paterson, N.J.

MARS EDWARD WAGAR.

Graduated with the class of 1881. See their Reports.

He writes: —

"The day I was forty years old I disposed of my business interests, and ceased active work in others. Since then I have devoted the most of my time to study and travel. I spent the spring of 1898 in Cuba, and came over here [Zürich, Switzerland] in July, 1899, with my wife and three children. Zürich offers exceptional educational advantages, and the children at least have profited thereby.

"Jan. 1, 1898, as trustee of the Cleveland Public Library and chairman of the Building Committee, I presided at the dedicatory exercises of the West Side Branch of the Public Library.

"My son Leonard died in Paris, April 26, 1900."

In the autumn of 1900 Wagar entered the Graduate School at Harvard, taking courses in Romance Philology, Comparative Literature, Italian and Old French Literature.

WILLIAM BERNARD WARING.

Has not been heard from.

EDWARD FREEMAN WELLES.

Is president of the Welles Investment Company at Denver, Col., and writes: —

"I have little of interest to report of myself since 1895, unfortunately not having distinguished myself in any way. The most important event to me has been the birth of my son, Charles Bourne Welles, on Sept. 24, 1895. In October, 1897, I removed with my family to Denver for permanent residence, my home being at 1345 Franklin Street, and my office as above. I have been for a number of years past, and still am, in the mining business, handling stocks, and operating a mine upon my own account, being president of the Conqueror Gold Mining and Milling Company, our property being located in Clear Creek County, this State. I am a member of the Denver University Club and the Rocky Mountain Harvard Club, being on the Executive Commiittee of the latter organization."

GORDON WENDELL.

Is a member of the firm of Jacob Wendell & Co., wholesale dry-goods merchants in New York, and lives at 126 East 35th Street. He writes: —

"I have been in the same business, and leading an uneventful life."

ALFRED JEROME WESTON.

A.B. 1883.

His permanent address is "The Portland" Washington, D.C.; and he writes that he has nothing of interest to report beyond what appeared in the Report of 1895.

He spends much time in travel.

HENRY WHITE.

Has not been heard from.

GEORGE WALTON WILLIAMS.

Is vice-president of the Carolina Savings Bank at Charleston, S.C. He writes: —

"I can scarcely believe that five years have elapsed since our last Class Report; but it is so, as you are calling on us for another account of ourselves.

"After looking over the '95 Report, I can see but little more to say except that I have another daughter, Martha Porter Williams, born April 14, 1897. Beyond this important event, my life has been on about the same general lines.

"For all the members of '82, accept my affectionate greetings."

FRANK HERBERT YOUNG.

Has given up business in Boston, and for some years lived in South Dennis on Cape Cod, where he was engaged in the manufacture of oil-skin clothing and outfittings for fishermen. He is now said to be on a farm in or near the town of Wellesley, Mass.

Exact address not known.

A SKETCH OF THE CHANGES AT HARVARD DURING THE LAST FIVE YEARS.

BY JOSEPH HENRY BEALE, JR., PROFESSOR OF LAW.

The last five years at Harvard have been years of steady but quiet change. Among the officers of the University the changes have been comparatively few, but important. The two members of the Corporation who in 1895 had survived from our day are members no longer: Mr. Brimmer has died; and the Treasurer, Mr. Hooper, has resigned. Of the Overseers in 1895 a bare majority are still in service: two of them are now Fellows. Of the Faculty, death has removed eight distinguished men who were members of it in our time. Mr. Thomas Motley, Instructor in Farming (whose name stood for so long at the head of the list), Professors Whitney, Child, Lane, Everett, Dunbar, and Allen, and Mr. Winsor, the Librarian, have died in quick succession. Professors Norton and Langdell have retired, and Professors Marsh and Cummings have resigned. The new appointments which interest '82 are three men of our own day: Professors Sanger, '81, and Grandgent, '83, and Mr. C. T. Copeland, '82.

The whole number of teachers in the last Catalogue was 448 as against 337 five years earlier, a gain of 30 per cent. The number of students in Harvard College was 1,902 against 1,667, a gain of 12 per cent.; in the whole University, 4,091 against 3,290, a gain of 25 per cent. The Summer School in 1900 had 787 students (besides 1,266 Cubans) against 515 five years earlier, a gain of 53 per cent.

The growth of the Library has been equally great. The Gore Hall collection comprises 379,000 volumes as against 323,000 five years ago. The only other collection to show a startling growth is that of the Law School, which has 50,400 volumes against 34,000. The number of books in the whole University Library is given in the last Catalogue as 548,000: the growth for five years was just about 100,000; the percentage of increase, 22.

Few new buildings have been completed. Randall Hall, a second dining hall, has been built on the corner of Kirkland Street and Divinity Avenue. It is a handsome building of brick and stone, in the Georgian style of architecture. The former Foxcroft Club has occupied it, and its present function is to supply board for students who cannot afford to pay for board at Memorial Hall or cannot be accommodated there. Phillips Brooks House, the home of the religious societies, and the scene of such social festivities as are officially provided for the students, has been constructed in the north-west corner of the yard, opposite the Gymnasium. The architect has successfully caught the spirit of the older college buildings, and has built a hall which combines a severe and plain colonial exterior with a tolerably rich colonial interior. On the Soldiers' Field a base-ball cage has been built, with money allowed by the corporation in consideration of the surrender to them of the old Carey building for the use of the department of Mining and Metallurgy. The new Carey building is of brick and plaster, with open beams, and is attractive inside and out. It is large enough to give excellent practice through the winter in fielding as well as in batting. The Newell Memorial Gate has been built on the north-east corner of the Soldiers' Field, with a handsome gate-keeper's lodge inside it; and an iron fence with brick and plaster posts surrounds the field on three sides. The new boat-house was almost completed, when it was burned to the ground last winter: it is now being rebuilt. Several new dormitories have been built by private owners, most of them on or near Mount Auburn Street.

The University stopped all building when, early in 1899, the price of building became excessive; but operations began again in the summer of 1900. There are now under construction six large university buildings: the Harvard Union, a club-house for the whole University, on the corner of Harvard and Quincy Streets; an Architectural Building on the corner of Broadway and Quincy Street; a Building for the department of Engineering on Oxford Street; a new section of the University Museum (the south-western corner) on Oxford Street; a Semitic Museum on Divinity Avenue; and an Infirmary on Mount Auburn Street, near the Cambridge Hospital. A beginning has also been made of surrounding the yard with a permanent fence, of iron with brick and plaster posts. Three of the ornamental gateways are now under construction, the gift of three of the classes.

Improvements have been made in several of the older buildings.

Bath-rooms have been placed in all the dormitories. The public halls are now lighted by electricity, and in many of them elaborate systems of ventilation have been installed. Appleton Chapel has been newly lighted, and ventilated with especial success. The old Chapel in University Hall has been restored as it was built by Bulfinch (though without the original gallery), and now makes a very attractive faculty room. The acoustical properties of several rooms, especially of the Fogg Lecture-room, have been greatly improved by Professor Sabine. As a result of his patient investigations for this purpose, Professor Sabine has made notable discoveries in architectural acoustics, the earliest result of which may be heard in the new Symphony Hall in Boston.

The finances of the University have greatly improved in the five years under review. In 1895 the amount of invested funds held by the Treasurer amounted to $8,381,581.83,— in 1899 (the latest figures printed), to $11,767,458.56,— an increase in four years of $3,385,876.73. This is exclusive of the increase in college buildings and land used for college purposes in Cambridge. There was a slight increase in the rate of income, which in 1899 was 4.59 per cent.

The great gifts of the last five years have been almost too numerous to mention. Among the most important are the following: Henry L. Pierce left about $800,000 for the general purposes of the University. Parts of it have already been appropriated for a book fund, an endowment fund for the Agassiz Museum, an Engineering Building, a Professorship of Comparative Medicine, and a Medical Laboratory with a fund for its endowment. Edward Austin left a fund of $500,000 for needy students and teachers. The Randall Charities Corporation appropriated $70,000 to build Randall Hall. An anonymous giver presented $100,000 for an Architectural Building and an equal amount for its endowment. Henry C. Warren left the University his house and land on the corner of Quincy and Harvard Streets and $144,000 in cash. The house is now used to contain the Child Memorial Library and other department libraries. On the land the new University Club is being built. For this building Major Henry L. Higginson has given $150,000. An unknown giver has presented a Memorial Fund of $100,000. Mr. James Stillman has given the new Infirmary and money to endow it. Mr. Agassiz, Mr. and Mrs. Shaw, and Mrs. Higginson have given $100,000 to complete the University Museum. This gift brings the total of Mr. Agassiz's gifts to the Museum to nearly $1,000,000. The late Rev. George E. Ellis has presented the "Harvard Ellis" Fund of about $100,000. An unknown benefactor has given over $150,000 to form a Professorship of Hygiene. Mr. George F. Fabyan has given $100,000 for a Professorship of Comparative Pathology. Mrs. Croft has bequeathed the same amount for researches on the cure of cancer. The Calvin Ellis Fund of nearly $300,000 has become available.

During the last five years a quiet but very important change has been made in the affairs of the University by legislation of the Corporation and the Faculty. The immediate result of the formation of the Faculty of Arts and Sciences (which has charge of Harvard College, the Lawrence Scientific School, and the Graduate School) was to add all the teachers of science to the College Faculty. All members, except one of the Faculty of the Divinity School and three members of the Faculty of the Law School, are also members of the Faculty which controls the college. The last step in the consolidation of the three departments was taken when the accounts of the Scientific School were merged with those of Harvard College. The Faculties of the Medical School, the Dental School, and the Veterinary School, have also been consolidated into a Faculty of Medicine; and the establishment of a great School of Comparative Medicine is planned. This step will, it is hoped, strengthen the weaker departments without weakening the Medical School.

Two subjects have principally occupied the Faculty of Arts and Sciences,— the three-year course for the A.B., and the requirements for admission to Harvard College. After long deliberation the Faculty finally voted to confer the degree of A.B. regularly in three years. The majority was not large enough to justify laying the vote before the Overseers for ratification; but the desired result is being rapidly reached, as the President pointed out in his last Report, by votes of the Faculty which do not require approval by the Overseers. For many years only one year's residence has been absolutely essential for obtaining the degree, the principal requirement having been the passing of a certain number of "courses." That number, 18½ five years ago, has been gradually reduced, until, in the case of boys passing an advanced admission examination in English, it may be only 16. Five courses in a year is now regarded as the normal number. Six is not thought an undue amount. An average student may, therefore, easily entitle himself to the bachelor's degree in three years. A large proportion of the class do so already (about fifty this year), and tradition alone fixes the normal period of study for the degree at four years.

While this is not a palatable fact to '82, it must be remembered that the problem is not so simple as it seems. The steadily increasing age of entrance to college, and a probably advanced requirement for entrance, with the extension of the elective system, and the maturer sort of work done by Freshmen, have made the present Freshman year more like the old Sophomore than the old Freshman year. The added year in the curriculum of the Law School and the Medical School, and the proposed year of graduate work as a preparation for business, put the student at graduation a year further away from establishment in his profession or business than he used to be; and the more liberalizing nature of the professional studies of the present day makes it less necessary to devote four years to undergraduate study. A compromise (in force in many universities) by which professional students alone might be excused from a fourth year of undergraduate study having obtained little support with us, the maintenance of the old normal four years' course has become very difficult.

The most striking feature of the newly adopted requirements for admission to college is the free substitute allowed for Greek. Under the old requirements (not so old as our time, however), a candidate who knew no Greek might be admitted; but he must instead be examined in advanced mathematics. Now he may make up the required number of points in any other subject. The number of subjects from which the student may choose is much increased, chiefly by adding new scientific studies.

A regular scheme of retiring allowances for members of the Faculties has been adopted, the fund for the payment of retiring allowances having become large enough to justify the establishment of a general system.

The resolution favoring the extension to the graduates of other departments of the University of the right of electing Overseers, now exercised by graduates of Harvard College alone, passed all the governing bodies of the University; but a bill to carry it into effect by a change in the charter was defeated in the Massachusetts Senate. A large majority of the Harvard men who intimately know the present condition of affairs in the University favor the change, for reasons of justice and of expediency; but it must be confessed that the first thought of a Harvard man is opposed to it.

Changes in the curriculum have been many, but most of them along old lines. Instruction has been offered for the first time in the Slavonic, Celtic, and Scandinavian languages. Increased instruction has also been offered in the principles of government, notably of municipal and colonial government. A beginning has been made of teaching the history and the fundamental principles of various kinds of business. It is hoped that students who intend to devote their lives to business may find it worth while to pass a year in advanced study of this sort.

In the social life of the University there has been little change in the last five years. The manly athletic type is still the student ideal. A curious feature of student life is the transfer of the social centre of the college to the new dormitories on Mount Auburn Street. In our time the least desirable portion of Old Cambridge, the tract between Harvard Square and the river, is rapidly becoming the only place where one can properly live. The merger of the Scientific School in the college is even more complete socially than in other ways. No distinction is now made in most of the societies, in class affairs, or in athletics, between the Scientific and the College students. The tendency of the last ten years to change the old-fashioned societies into clubs is stronger than ever. The effect of the new Harvard Union on the societies will be watched with some interest.

The most striking thing in student life during the last five years is the renewed general interest in athletics. Several causes have contributed to this. The increased area available for sports since the Soldiers' Field came into use, the substitution of the scrub games in baseball and football for the class series, and, above all, the attention paid to rowing. Mr. Lehmann's coming among us turned the attention of the students to the pleasure of rowing on the beautiful Charles; and the true sportsmanlike spirit he fostered gave rowing a general popularity it has never had before. Mr. D. M. Goodrich, then captain of the crew, by recognizing the Weld Boat Club as a possible school for university oarsmen, changed the whole system of rowing, and really did more for the success of Harvard crews than any university captain for many years. From that time the Weld has turned out more 'Varsity oarsmen, unless

I am mistaken, than the Freshmen or University coaches. Another club of a similar sort, the Newell Club, has been formed; and every member of the University who desires to row is a member of one of these clubs. A large proportion of the students row; and in spring the river is full of singles, pair-oars, and eights. A greater contrast than that between present conditions at the clubs and the old days at the Weld it would be hard to find. In baseball and football, organized efforts have been made with success to get out a large number of candidates for the teams, and to try every candidate so thoroughly that no promising man can possibly be overlooked. Candidates for the 'Varsity and Freshman teams are now numbered by the hundred, and every candidate has his chance. Hundreds of men also form the scrub teams to play for the cups, and as many more train for the track and field games. Others habitually play tennis, golf, and the minor sports. It is obvious that actual participation in athletics, not merely presence at the games, forms a considerable part of the life of every student. An immediate result of the change is seen in our greater success in intercollegiate contests. Of even greater importance is the increased health and strength of the students, both physical and mental.
